House Votes Roosevelt Broad Power on Tariff; Cotton Cut Bill Is Passed

Budd Strike Settlement Made on Auto Peace Basis

Roosevelt Plan Seen as Future Labor Policy Of Government.

Company Unions Victorious Again

Only 3,000 Affected, but Principle Involved Is Far-Reaching.

By Felix Bruner.

That the Government has adopted the recent settlement forced by President Roosevelt in the automobile labor controversy as the basis of its labor policy was further demonstrated last night when NRA announced settlement of the long-standing strike in the E. G. Budd Co. automobile body factory at Philadelphia, on virtually the same terms as the automobile settlement.

The announcement said the company had agreed to lay off employes when the necessity arose for reducing its force in the same manner as that provided in the President's agreement with the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

This agreement provided that when forces are reduced, the first consideration should be given to married men and the next to seniority and efficiency. After that, the agreement provides, men belonging to various labor organizations within a plant shall be laid off in numbers proportionate to the membership in the organization.

Recognizes Company Unions.

This provision recognizes company unions and places them on an equality with outside unions, including those affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The Budd agreement also provided that during the next 90 days the company will re-employ at least one of the strikers out of every two men hired. It was added that there would not be any great increase in the total force as a result of this understanding, but that replacements will create considerable employment.

In addition it was announced, but with no connection with the rest of the agreement, the company offered to undertake "clean-up" operation at the plant in order to relieve distress of some of the strikers.

"While this employment will be of short duration and at wages appropriate to the job, it is hoped that it will help a part of the men," the announcement said, adding:

"The strikers are satisfied with the above and will call the strike off. The Budd Co. is under the automobile code and subject to the recent settlement of the automobile labor controversy."

There was no indication when the automobile controversy was

Mother Kills 2 Children, Self

Takes Poison, Cuts Throat, Puts Head in Furnace, Dives 2 Floors.

Morgantown, W. Va., March 29 (AP).—When Mrs. O. B. Fawley slew her two children last night she took extraordinary care to make sure she did not survive her act.

She drank poison.

Going down into the cellar she thrust her head into the furnace door, singeing most of her hair off.

She returned to the second floor and jumped out a window. She tumbled off a porch roof, fell into the yard, and managed to crawl under the porch, where she died.

Her husband, returning a short time afterward, found the bodies of his two children, Margaret, 11, and Harold, 23, in the living room. No motive was assigned.

Switzes to Remain In Jail for Safety

Paris, March 29 (AP).—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gordon Switz, Americans held on espionage charges, made their monthly appearance in court today to learn that their imprisonment will be prolonged at least another month.

It was indicated that the couple will stay behind the bars of a French prison until they are brought to trial, if for no other reason than to escape the vegeance of persons whom they are alleged by police to have implicated as international spies.

Earthquake Terrifies Residents of Bucharest

Bucharest, Rumania, March 29 (U.P.).—A violent earthquake at 9:18 p. m. today sent citizens fleeing into the streets in a panic.

Telephonic communication was interrupted when girls in various exchanges fainted from fright. No casualties were reported in initial check-ups.

House Board to Sift Wirt 'Revolt' Charge

Dr. William A. Wirt, Gary educator, and Mrs. Wirt, who shares her husband's view that the Roosevelt "Brain Trust" may have designs on Democracy.

Gary, Ind., March 29 (U.P.).—Dr. William Wirt balked tonight at limitations voted by a House Rules Committee as to his testimony concerning a "revolutionary plot" by "Brain Trust" members.

"I'll go to jail rather than be gagged by a House committee interested only in finding out the names of the "Brain Trust" members to whom I talked," the Gary school superintendent said.

A special committee of five members last night was empowered by the House to call Dr. William A. Wirt to Washington to disclose what "Brain Trusters" told him America is moving toward "a deliberately planned revolution."

The investigation was authorized after an hour's debate, and a brief Republican skirmish to broaden the scope of the inquiry.

Speaker Henry T. Rainey said he will name the committee after the House convenes Monday. He said he will appoint as chairman Representative Alfred L. Bulwinkle, North Carolina Democrat, who

Turkey Bars Insull Flight To Black Sea

Greek Steamer Delayed at Istanbul While Cabinet Meets.

Istanbul, Turkey, March 29 (AP).—While the Greek freighter Maiotis rode at anchor in Istanbul Harbor tonight, apparently stalemated in an effort to take Samuel Insull to a new refuge, the Turkish cabinet conducted an extraordinary meeting.

Although no inkling was given as to the object of the special cabinet session, it was considered specially significant since it was called on the last day of a national holiday.

Insull, fleeing to the very doors of Asia in his desperate efforts to evade American extradition demands, appeared to have found the modern portals of the mysterious East not so softly yielding as the old Oriental romances picture them.

Ship Remains Moored.

Officially there was no explanation of the Maiotis' prolonged stay here, but statements of the ship's officers that she would leave for Rumania at 2 p. m. today contrasted sharply with the fact that the grimy tramp remained tied to her buoy shortly before midnight.

The possibility that Insull might abandon his search for a Black Sea haven and return to his wanderings in the Mediterranean developed when the craft was apparently denied permission to proceed northward.

A Reuter's News Agency dispatch to London said it was understood that American authorities asked Turkey to arrest Insull and that this request accounted for the Maiotis's delay.

The freighter, on which the 71-year-old fugitive fled from Greece March 18, remained outside the Bosporus, the gateway to the Black

U. S. to Force Virgin Islands Rum Monopoly

Government Agency Will Be Chartered in D. C., Ickes Announces.

Establishment of a Government rum monopoly in the Virgin Islands probably will go forward through incorporation of a new Government agency which will obtain its charter in the District of Columbia, Secretary of the Interior Ickes announced yesterday.

Ickes stated that the legislative council of the islands had rejected the proposal that the United States Government take over the industry there and refused to grant a charter. The Secretary said the proposal was opposed in the islands "by selfish local interests."

"Undoubtedly what we propose is for the good of the islands," Ickes said. "I can see no other way to bring them rehabilitation.

"Since the islands refused us a charter, it appears likely that we will simply go to the District of Columbia and obtain incorporation for a Government agency to operate the monopoly, and go in anyway."

A grant of $1,000,000 was made some time ago by the Public Works Administration to finance the monopoly. Ickes expressed the opinion that the agency would function much the same as the housing corporation of the PWA.

The plan, as outlined by officials of the Department of the Interior and a committee to study the economic rehabilitation of the islands, calls for Governmental operation of the monopoly, with native workers sharing in the profits. Employment would be given natives on sugar plantations and in the distilleries manufacturing rum and bay rum from the sugar cane.

It was proposed that 50 per cent of the profits be distributed to the native workers on a pro rata basis, and 50 per cent be devoted to an islands welfare association. At the time the proposal was made public it was explained that the once prosperous rum industry in the Virgin Islands had been ruined by prohibition in the United States and that the natives were living in advanced stages of destitution.

Establishment of the monopoly, it was said, would afford employment and provide a large measure of rehabilitation for the islands.

Austria Bans U. S. Magazines, Tears Down 'Immoral' Statues

Vienna, March 29 (AP).—In surprise orders issued today, the Dollfus government banned 100 foreign publications, including several from the United States, and ordered the removal of nude statues from the streets of Austrian cities.

The order against the foreign publications marked the beginning of a drive against objectionable or immoral newspapers and magazines sold here, it was announced.

The list of those banned include the Saturday Evening Post, the American Magazine, Variety, True Story Magazine, Wide World, Pearson's Magazine, La vie Parisienne, Paris Plaisirs, the Daily Sketch and the News Chronicle, the latter two being British publications.

In Philadelphia, George Horace Lorimer, editor of the Saturday Evening Post and president of the Curtis Publishing Co., said: "I do not know any reason why they should do it." Magazine editors in New York chuckled over the order. Sid Silverman, editor of Variety, observed: "It's a gag." Sumner Blossom, editor of the American Magazine, asserted that the order was "silly." A spokesman for the McFadden publications said he believed the Austrians had confused their magazine, True Story, with one of a similar name published in Berlin.

Government workers, after receiving the order that nude statues be eliminated from the streets here, began tearing down a number regarded as coming within the scope of the new instructions.

Among the statues torn down was that of a naked figure of a farmer sowing grain. It had been erected on Tabor street by the former Socialist city government, most of the members of which now are in jail.

Princess Elizabeth Windisch-Graetz, granddaughter of the late Emperor Francis Joseph and long a friend of the Socialists, was questioned by police today.

Barred Air Lines Learn Fate Today

Specifications for New Mail Contracts to Be Made Public.

Ordered Reorganization of Major Companies Hits Chances.

Specifications for the temporary air-mail contracts to be let by the Postoffice Department will be made public today, deciding, in a measure, the fate of a number of the Nation's largest aviation companies.

After receiving the specifications, which were completed last night by Eugene Vidal, Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aviation, private carriers whose contracts were canceled will decide whether to reorganize and bid for the new, temporary routes.

It was understood, however, that requirements as to speed will be low—probably in the neighborhood of 110 miles an hour—in which case small independent companies throughout the country will have an opportunity to bid, and the vastly speedier planes of the big air lines will not, alone, enable them to obtain the contracts.

Ask Ruling Clarified.

If the specifications set up by Vidal as to speed, weight, &c., were to come up to the large carriers' own requirements, it would mean elimination from the bidding of many small companies which now are expected to enter the competition.

Meanwhile, large and small carriers, uncertain as to the Postoffice Department's intentions, are urging clarification of the ruling that former holders of air-mail contracts must reorganize to be eligible for bidding.

Representatives of major air lines, who appealed yesterday to Harlee Branch, Second Assistant Postmaster General, were told to submit their questions in writing. It was clearly indicated at the Postoffice Department, in the absence of Postmaster General Farley, that there would be no weakening of the Administration's position that companies desiring to bid must expel officials who attended the so-called "spoils conference" of 1930, at which, it is alleged, air-mail routes were divided up.

Future in Doubt.

In this connection, it was pointed out yesterday that American Airways, of which E. L. Cord is head, was not formed under its present control until after the 1930 conference. With lines closely paralleling some of the new routes set up by Farley, American Airways is regarded as occupying an extremely favorable position.

The other large carrier groups, under the holding companies known as North American Aviation, Inc., and United Aircraft and Transport Corporation, were frankly at sea as to their future yesterday. Key officials of their operating companies attended the so-called "collusion" meeting.

Officials of North American and United said they could not tell whether they would bid on the new contracts.

It was pointed out that under the terms of the Postoffice Department's advertisement, "a bidder must submit evidence indicating he can meet the requirements of the Department of Commerce with reference to a certificate of authority to operate this route." The possibility was seen that this clause might eliminate small carriers who might enter the bidding without being competent

Now for Londos! Policeman Pins Goose to Mat!

Baltimore, March 29 (Spl.). After a five-minute wrestling bout on a hard concrete pavement with a wild goose, Patrolman Paul Weaver, 185 pounds, secured a drumstick hold on his feathered opponent and threw it for a loss.

The fowl, all 10 pounds of it, is now in solitary confinement, with a fare of bread and water, while police figure on what to do with their prisoner.

According to witnesses, the goose swooped down to the pavement, strutted up and down for the benefit of a crowd, which collected quickly. Patrolman Weaver decided some one might kill the goose for dinner, and thought it would be best to take it to the police station for safe keeping. The goose resisted arrest.

"Future Pains" Bring Crash Victim $1,000

Sunbury, Pa., March 29 (AP).—A verdict of $1,682—with $1,000 of it designated as compensation for "future pains"—was awarded John W. Clark, of Dumfries, Va., by a jury today in his suit against H. H. Follmer, a Milton trucker.

'Unconstitutional,' Cry of Opponents

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

By a vote of 46 to 39, the Senate yesterday approved the Bankhead cotton-control bill, the first legislative act designed to coerce American farmers into adhering to crop-reduction programs under the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Assailed on both sides of the aisle as unconstitutional, impractical, socialistic and as the opening wedge of a movement to regiment the country forcefully, the bill now goes to a conference, since some of the "teeth" which it possessed when passed by the House were drawn by Senate amendments.

Shortly after approving the Bankhead bill, the Senate, without a record vote, concurred in the conference report on the bill adding cattle and other farm products to the list of AAA basic commodities and appropriating $250,000,000 for rehabilitation of the cattle industry.

Ready for White House.

Originally designed to bring cattle under the AAA so that benefit payments might be made for reducing beef production and a processing tax levied, the bill was loaded down with amendments making peanuts, rye, barley, flax and grain sorghums basic commodities. The House concurred in these Senate amendments. The bill is now ready to go to the White House.

During the brief debate on the conference report on the so-called cattle bill, Senator L. J. Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, mantained that the AAA program would cost the Treasury $500,000,000 or more. He pointed out that collections from processing taxes had lagged far behind expenditures for reduction.

When the AAA act was passed by Congress it was described as a self-supporting form of farm relief and would not bear on the Treasury or taxpayers generally. It was thought the processing taxes, paid by the consumers, would cover the cost of the program.

First Six Bales Exempt.

The Bankhead bill, as it passed the Senate, provided that a penalty tax of 75 per cent of the market price shall be assessed against all cotton ginned in excess of 10,000,000 bales. The latter figure would be apportioned among States, counties and planters, except that the first six bales of cotton ginned by any planter will be tax exempt.

Former Senator Dies by Bullet

W. E. Wells Accidentally Shot Self, Says Coroner.

Newell, W. Va., March 29 (Spl.). With a bullet wound in his head and a pistol by his side, W. Edwin Wells, 42, former State Senator and a leading industrial executive of West Virginia, was found dead today in his room.

B. E. Cato, coroner gave a verdict of accidental death, saying Wells had kept a pistol under his pillow at night and that apparently the weapon was accidentally discharged.

Since the death of his father a year ago, Wells had been superintendent of the Homer Laughlin China, Co. A Republican, he represented the First District in the State Senate from 1929 to 1932. He was a trustee of Bethany College. Surviving are the widow and three children, who were spending the winter at Deland, Fla.

Shell Travels 9 Miles After Piercing Armor

Sheffield, England, March 29 (AP). An armor-piercing shell, which when fired at armorplate of equal thickness to the calibre of the gun will not only perforate the plate without breaking, but will travel nine miles farther, was described today.

Sir Robert Hadfield, famous metallurgist, explained that the shell is the latest made in Sheffield. It weighs nearly a ton.

Wife Seeks to Enjoin Mate's Churchgoing

Chicago, March 29 (AP).—Even with Easter at hand, Mrs. Sarah Andante doesn't want her husband to go to church.

She asked a judge today to issue an injunction keeping Frank, the husband, away from church entirely unless he goes with her. He's been going, she said, with a "Jane Doe."

Otto H. Kahn, Banker And Arts Patron, Dies

Heart Clot Ends Career of Senior Partner in Kuhn-Loeb.

New York, March 29 (AP).—Otto H. Kahn, whose operations in the field of finance wielded a powerful influence on the early twentieth century, died suddenly today. He was 67 years old.

At 1:45 p. m. the banker-patron of art and music slumped in his chair, fell to the floor of his private office in the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., of which he had been a dominating partner since leaving his native Germany for the United States years ago.

A blood clot in the heart caused death.

Word that Kahn had died spread over Manhattan rapidly, but the banking firm made no statement of it until the stock market closed at 3 p. m., fearful of a possible influence on trading.

Though a bit weakened by age and recent ailments, Kahn yesterday and earlier today appeared in fair health. He occupied early this week his box in the "Golden Horseshoe" of the Metropolitan, an institution he helped to build to preeminence in the operatic world,

N. Y. Senator Paid by Utility Firm, Charge

Expense Accounts From State Legislator Are Introduced.

Evidence that W. T. Thayer, New York State senator for the Thirty-fourth District, was obtaining funds from a utility company while acting in their interest as a member of the Legislature was introduced yesterday in the Federal Trade Commission's investigation of the Associated Gas & Electric Companies.

Copies of four letters signed by Thayer reporting his activities to the concern and its managing company were introduced in evidence by Col. W. T. Chantland, attorney for the commission. A. M. McDermott, commission examiner, testified he obtained the copies from the files of the J. G. White Management Corporation, the managing concern of the Associated Gas & Electric Companies.

One of the letters, addressed by Thayer to S. J. Magee, vice president of the Associated group, stated that "in keeping with your instructions regarding my expense account for the month of March in connection with the village election, I herewith hand you bill, as suggested, made out to the Chasm Power Co.

"I hope my work during the past session was satisfactory to your company," it added, "not so much for the new legislation enacted, but from the fact that many detrimental bills which were introduced we were able to kill in my committee."

Another letter sent by Thayer to Magee told of incurring expenses of $457 in a village election. "Will you kindly advise me if it would be satisfactory to put this amount in my next expense account to Mr. Pierce the same as I did last year?" the letter asked.

CCC Wants 120,000 Men For 2d Year

Success of Relief Plan May Result in Its Permanency.

By Raymond Clapper.

The Civilian Conservation Corps, one of the most novel experiments of the Roosevelt Administration, will begin its second year next week by offering about 120,000 men outdoor work with board and keep and $30 a month pay.

Enrollment of approximately this number of youths between 18 and 25 years of age will begin at Army recruiting stations Monday. Corps area commanders have been given orders for handling this civilian force, which is almost as large as the Army itself. After the recruits have been given physical examinations they will be sent either to conditioning camps for two weeks of toughening, or if deemed sufficiently hardened already they will be shipped direct to forest camps.

Army officers who have to examine, innoculate, clothe and equip these civilian recruits look enviously upon this potential Army manpower which goes through their mill, not to mention the enlisted men who draw $17.85 a month as against $30 of CCC workers. But they have been unable to shake President Roosevelt in his insistence that these men be given no military training.

Assistant Secretary of War Woodring wrote a magazine article recently suggesting militarization of CCC recruits, but was roundly spanked by the White House and later explained that he had no intention of making soldiers out of them.

This incident set at rest many rumors that through the CCC plan Mr. Roosevelt was indirectly training a new potential army, which

U. S. Stands to Lose $350,000 By O'Hearne Release Ruling

Loss of several hundred thousand dollars to the Government and freedom for more than 3,000 prohibition prisoners was seen yesterday as a possible outcome of a ruling by District Supreme Court Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue which freed Jack O'Hearne, reputed king of Washington's speakeasy operators.

Justice Department officials conceded that failure of a higher Federal court to reverse Justice O'Donoghue's decision would materially weaken the Government's defense in similar cases and would result in a flood of applications for habeas corpus writs to free dry law prisoners in other jurisdictions.

The department's prohibition division prepared yesterday to carry the O'Hearne case to the United States Supreme Court and to ask that the O'Donoghue decision be set aside in a fight against wholesale invalidation of fines, forfeitures and bond defaults which, it was estimated, would cost the Government approximately $350,000.

In the O'Hearne case alone, the Government stands to lose a $1,000 fine which Justice O'Donoghue voided when granting O'Hearne his freedom after he had served three months of a ten-month sentence.

There were 3,443 prohibition law violators in Federal prisons and other institutions at the end of last year, Justice Department reports showed. Of this number, officials said, a large portion were assessed heavy fines which have not yet been collected. In addition, the Government stands to lose considerable sums in bond and other forfeitures if Justice O'Donoghue's decision is upheld.

Application for habeas corpus in behalf of prohibition prisoners on grounds that they are being held by a repudiated law, have been prevalent in Federal court districts where U. S. penitentiaries are located. In the only other case similar to O'Hearne's yet brought to trial, Federal Judge Underwood, of the Atlanta district, denied habeas writs to prisoners convicted before the effective date of repeal.

All District prohibition prisoners with the exception of six in the Lorton Reformatory have been freed by Justice O'Donoghue's rulings.

Administration Defeats G. O. P. Opponents by 273-to-111 Vote.

Debt Cancellation Forbidden in Bill

Existing Duties May Be Raised or Slashed Up to 50%.

By Robert C. Albright.

The broadest tariff powers ever granted a President, to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements in the interest of foreign commerce, yesterday were voted 273 to 111 by a Democratic House, once more in line with the Administration.

The bill was pressed to passage after six days of almost continuous debate, the shortest trip any tariff bill ever took through the House.

Only two changes were made in the measure, both sponsored by the Ways and Means Committee and acceptable to the White House. Nearly 40 amendments offered by a minority militantly opposed to the bill were cried down almost as rapidly as they were offered.

Debt Cancellation Forbidden.

The only two amendments attached to the bill would limit unprecedented tariff powers of the President specifically to three years and provide that under no condition shall the White House reduce or cancel any existing foreign debts, under the terms of a trade agreement.

The powers voted the President in the bill are twofold.

1. They enable him to enter into foreign trade agreements with foreign governments or their instrumentalities, without Congressional ratification.

2. They authorize the President to raise or lower existing duties up to a limit of 50 per cent, proclaiming any modification of present tariffs within this limit he sees fit.

During 22 hours of sharp debate, Democratic sponsors of the measure argued the powers are necessary to promote expansion of foreign markets for this country's products, while a stiff Republican opposition charged unconstitutionality and an attempt to stifle small industries.

Industry Safeguard Refused.

The Republican minority made a fruitless effort to limit the trade agreements themselves to five years duration, and to provide a Congressional check on the President's authority, but their proposals went the way of the two-score other defeated amendments.

One attempt, sponsored by a

Whisky Import Ban Is Lifted

Rye and Bourbon May Be Brought Into U. S. for 3 Months.

For the third time since importation of liquor was authorized, the Federal Alcohol Control Administration yesterday lifted all restrictions on importation of American type bourbon and rye whiskys.

The order covers the month of April. According to Joseph H. Choate, jr., head of the administration, it will bridge the gap between March 31, when the second unrestricted period ends, and May 1, when a 61-day unrestricted period will open by order of President Roosevelt.

The step was taken to afford sufficient supply of the American type whiskys for blending. It will not affect the $5-a-gallon import duty.

Authorization of the unrestricted period is in line with the alcohol administration's efforts to assure ample supplies of liquor at lower prices than have prevailed since repeal.

Because of the opening of the 61-day unrestricted period May 1, yesterday's order, in effect, creates a three-month period in which there will be an unlimited flow of the two types of whisky into the country. By the end of that period, it is felt American distilleries and rectifying plants will be in a better position both as to supply and price of their products.

Mrs. Blacklidge Wins Right to Bail Freedom

Chicago, March 29 (AP).—Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blacklidge won her release for a few minutes today from the toils of an old Illinois law which an annoyed wife invoked against her. Mrs. Blacklidge posted bond for a 30-day respite, long enough to put the whole affair up to the higher courts.

It was the third attempt of the former internal revenue official to shake herself free from the $7,500 judgment won by Mrs. Norman Nottingham for alienating the affections of Mr. Nottingham.

Auto Leaders Seek Formula To End Strikes

Ford Motor Co. Status Presents Problem to Labor Board.

Detroit, March 29 (AP).—Blazing an uncharted course, the newly appointed Automobile Labor Board met here today and planned how to make effective the settlement that averted a general strike in the automotive industry.

Dr. Leo Wolman, who has given up temporarily his position with Columbia University to serve as neutral member and chairman of the board, explained that he and his fellow members were without precedents to guide them, since it is the first board of its kind, and that several decisions on procedure would have to be made before the board can start work in earnest.

William S. Knudsen, executive vice president of General Motors Corporation; Edward F. Fisher, vice president of Fisher Body Corporation, and Merle C. Hale, director of industrial relations for General Motors, conferred with the board this afternoon. Hale said it was merely a "get-acquainted" meeting.

Consideration of complaints by union men that employers have discriminated against them will be a major part of the board's duties, and Dr. Wolman said a number of such complaints were on file when the board convened.

One jurisdictional question that awaits decision, Dr. Wolman said, is whether the board is empowered to act in any dispute between employes and employers of the Ford Motor Co. The Ford Co. has signed neither the National automobile code nor the agreement that ended the strike threat last Sunday. Wolman said that he did not know what position the board would take in such a dispute.

Wynekoop Son Meets Mother

Dwight, Ill., March 29 (AP).—The long-missing Earle Wynekoop reached the door of the Illinois Women's Reformatory today just in time to bid farewell to his mother, Dr. Alice Wynekoop, as she entered upon a 25-year prison term.

It was a startling epilogue of the tragedy—the murder of Earle's wife, Rheta, in his mother's surgical office, and the trial of the mother while her son remained hidden.

Shabbily dressed, his hair disheveled and untrimmed, the son for whose love Dr. Wynekoop was charged by the State with having taken the life of her daughter-in-law, appeared in the crowd at the prison entrance about three minutes before his mother's arrival.

The strength of the 63-year-old prisoner, who was being helped into the prison anteroom, failed her at the sight of her son. She fell into his embrace.

Earle helped his mother into a chair, and bending low he whispered rapidly for several minutes. He appeared to be trying to win her to assent to something, but the mother shook her head vehemently.

Then attendants helped her to her feet and she was helf-carried away for the routine incident to her imprisonment.

It was the first time Earle and his mother had met since their joint questioning at the Fillmore Police Station in Chicago, immediately after the murder last November 21.

NRA Gags Officials Under 'No Talking to Press' Order

Public Is Banned From Hearing on Carpet Code Here.

A cover was placed over the NRA "goldfish bowl" yesterday when the order went out that administrators and employes must not give information to reporters.

The order "reminded" officials and employes that information must come solely from William V. Lawson, director of publicity. Even one of Lawson's own assistants was invited to leave a code hearing.

At the same time it was announced that Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, would resume his regular press conferences next week. He has held no such conferences for more than a month.

The order to eschew contact with reporters went only to the seven division administrators. It was signed by Alvin Brown, executive assistant to Johnson, and reminded subordinates that "information to the press should go out through the public relations department and not direct to reporters."

"Will you please convey this information verbally to all in your division whom it might affect?" the order asked.

At almost the same time, Thomas Peters, one of Lawson's assistants, was attending a hearing on the rug and carpet code at the Washington Hotel, with the purpose of making information obtained there public in a press release. Representatives of the industry protested that the meeting was closed and invited Peters to leave.

Virginia Woodbury Lowery Brunetti, Duchess of Arcos, left an estate in America valued at $2,940,060, it was disclosed yesterday, when Montgomery Blair and the National Savings & Trust Co. filed a petition to probate her will.

The duchess died in Rome, Italy, March 8, and named as her sole survivors at law Gist Blair, of Bar Harbor, Me., and Montgomery Blair, who were the sons of Mary Elizabeth Blair, sister of the duchess.

The estate left by the duchess, who is the only American girl known to have married a Spanish grandee, comprised $443,386 in real estate, $2,099,701 in personal property, which consisted of stocks, bonds and cash and $396,973 from the estate of her father, the late Archibald H. Lowery.

Property in the duchess' estate is at 1000 Vermont avenue and 701, 703 and 705 Seventh street northwest. Of her father's estate, she had disposed of real estate at 1626 Fourteenth street and 1600 Fourteenth street and of stocks valued at $320,173.

The death of the duchess stirred social Washington. At that time her estate was estimated to be worth $15,000,000. Inventories taken during the depression period resulted in usual devaluation. Washington charities and her two first cousins, Montgomery Blair and Gist Blair, were named as the principal beneficiaries.

Trial Delayed As Brothers Claim "Error"

A striking resemblance between two brothers puzzled police and Traffic Court attaches yesterday, and brought a continuance of reckless driving charges against Joseph Diblasi, 6600 block of Georgia avenue northwest.

Diblasi was identified as the motorist who drove his automobile through fire lines in the 900 block of Ninth street northwest early Monday and was fired upon by a policeman when he failed to heed a detour signal.

The man, however, denied he was driving the machine, and testified he surrendered to police in an effort to protect his brother. Members of Diblasi's family also testified the brother was in possession of the car when it was reputed to have "crashed" the fire lines.

The brothers bear a marked resemblance to each other. Policemen, however, testified it was Joseph Diblasi who was driving the machine. The case was continued by Gas A. Schuldt to allow summoning of additional witnesses.

Policeman C. R. Burnett, meanwhile faces trial board action for firing his pistol at the machine.

Curran Lauds Veteran Veto

Economy League Leader Declares Roosevelt Right in Action.

President Roosevelt's veto of the independent offices bill restoring the pay cut and providing benefits to veterans not hurt by war service, was yesterday upheld by Henry H. Curran, director of the National Economy League.

"The President was right and still is right," Curran said. "He has stated the principle of generous treatment for disabled veterans. The people approve this principle.

"The disturbing feature of this affair," Curran added, "is the possibility that it is a foot in the door which may eventually pry the door wide open for payment of pensions to the 4,000,000 veterans of the World War, who got no injury at all through their war service."

Curran charged that payment of pensions to veterans would create staggering burdens that would prevent the Government from balancing the budget.

House Votes Tariff Powers To Roosevelt

Democrat, Representative Francis B. Condon, Rhode Island, sought to provide a written guarantee that no American industry might be destroyed by trade bargaining. It was defeated 132 to 96 after the Ways and Means Chairman Robert L. Doughton called it a "Tomfool" amendment.

From the start, the fight was conducted strictly along partisan lines, and the final outcome showed the President's forces had recovered completely from Tuesday's set-back on the independent offices bill.

Only 11 Democrats lined up with 99 Republicans and 1 Farmer-Laborite against passage, and but 2 Republicans and 3 Farmer-Laborites voted with 268 Democrats in support.

Republicans casting their votes for the measure were Hubert H. Peavey, Wisconsin, and Richard J. Welch, California, and Farmer-Laborites voting yes were Arens, Kvale and Johnson, all of Minnesota.

Democrats voting with Republicans against the bill were Brown, Michigan; Burke, California; Carpenter, Nebraska; Connery, Massachusetts; Duffey, Ohio; Gray, Indiana; Maloney, Connecticut; Montet, Louisiana; Moran, Maine; Scrugham, Nevada, and Secrest, Ohio.

The bill, one of the few major measures to be considered in the House this session without a "gag" on debate or amendments, was sent at once to the Senate, where leaders forecast passage with little or any change.

Leading the fight against the legislation, Representative Allen T. Treadway, Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, concluded debate on the bill, which he charged would "sacrifice industry, agriculture and labor for foreign interests."

"Dictatorship" Says Treadway.

Representative Treadway, who charged setting up of "a tariff dictatorship," offered half a dozen unsuccessful amendments, ranging from proposals to equalize cost of production in trade agreements, to a requirement that hearings be held by the Tariff Commission before changes are promulgated.

As many more were put forward by Representative James A. Frear (Republican), Wisconsin, who sought to prevent tariff bargaining with defaulting nations and provide for notice when importations exceed a given limit. His amendments were shouted down en masse, when he did not ask a separate vote.

An amendment by Representative Michael J. Hart (Democrat), Michigan, to prevent reductions in sugar tariffs, threatened to upset the committee's program. But on standing and teller votes it was beaten by margins of 86 to 71, and 121 to 114, respectively.

A futile effort to remove Cuba from preferential status under the bill was made by Representative John A. Martin (Democrat), Colorado.

The Condon amendment, which the Rhode Island Democrat said was a "safeguard" for struggling industries that foreign imports would not destroy them, also threatened. It was defeated after committee Democrats pointed out there would be no yardstick to measure the effect of imports on an industry.

Quoting the President, Representative Jere Cooper (Democrat), Tennessee, said it is not the intention of the Administration to wield its power to the detriment of any going domestic concerns.

Representative Emanuel Celler (Democrat), New York, was supported by the Republican minority in an effort to limit treaties negotiated by the President to 5 years. Despite the emergency limitation restricting the President's powers to three years, he declared in the last week of that authority the President could negotiate a 50-year agreement with any foreign government. His amendment failed.

Although the President has no power under the bill to transfer articles to or from the dutiable or free lists, he was voted authority to "freeze" items on either of the lists, as a lever in trading abroad.

Marines Just Can't Be Kept From Fighting—Look at This

By Harry Ferguson.

Right after the World War armistice was signed, life became a bit tedious for the United States Marines, so several of the boys went out and engineered private fights just to keep in practice.

The matter wouldn't be worth mentioning except for the fact that Congress received an expense account yesterday for all this extra-curricular warfare, which seems to have been waged over a period of years on a front extending roughly from the Halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli.

Most of it was close-order combat, and, according to the report filed with Congress by Secretary of State Cordell Hull, the adversary of the Marine frequently turned out to be a bartender. To put it bluntly, the U. S. A. owes a total of $4,957.05 for damages and hospital expenses to citizens of foreign lands who forgot to duck when some Marine decided to practice the science of war.

Mr. Hull sadly reports the case, for instance, of one Li Po-Tien, who ran a bar room in Tientsin, which the naval board of investigation ascertained "was apparently frequented by various members of the United States Marine Corps." Li Po-Tien, the board learned, allowed the boys to put drinks on the cuff, which, as you know, inevitably leads to an argument. On January 2, 1929, at 12:30 a. m. precisely, Private Anthony R. Tofil, of the Marines, got into an argument with Li Po-Tien about—guess what?

Before it ended Li Po-Tien got smacked $300 worth on "the arms, back, face, neck and chest." Tofil got ten years in the jug.

One thing about our boys is that they were strictly impartial; they didn't confine their practice work to one country. A couple of 'em delivered a flank attack on one Henry Borday down in Port au Prince and fisticuffed him to the tune of $1,000 damages.

Meantime, great things were happening down in Nicaragua, where Juan Francisco Rivas tangled with a couple of the boys and lost the decision and $6 worth of clothing. He got $32.50 worth of black eyes, bringing his total claim to $38.50.

Shortly previous to that 22 marines went in for literary criticism by wrecking a Nicaraguan newspaper which carried an article they didn't like, and that's going to cost us $1,500.

The board of investigation carefully noted that "the offense apparently was committed, not in a mood of recklessness, but deliberately, and in a high spirit of indignation."

That's what we get for teaching people how to read.

Steel Pay Rise Spread to Take In 225,000 Men

10 Per Cent Wage Boost Will Include All Parts of Nation.

(Associated Press.)

A 10 per cent pay increase by April 1 was assured today to 40,000 more steel workers.

Announcements of better pay Tuesday and Wednesday affected approximately 186,000. More companies joined the chorus yesterday, bringing the total of affected workers to more than 225,000 in an industry employing between 300,000 and 400,000 men.

Leading off yesterday was American Steel & Wire Co., a subsidiary of United States Steel. The wire company employs 15,000 to 18,000 workers.

Cleveland officials confirmed reports of approximately a 10 per cent increase April 1, and said it was their understanding all the company's plants would be similarly affected.

Another United States Steel subsidiary, Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., announced at Birmingham an increase affecting 12,000 men.

Gulf States Steel Corporation, Gadsen, Ala., 2,900 men.

Acme Steel Co., Chicago, 1,400.

Lehman Urges People to Join In Power Fight

Pleads for Pressure on N.Y. Legislators to Beat Utility 'Machine.'

New York, March 29 (AP).—Disclosures by the Federal Power Commission at Washington today of letters purporting to show that State Senator W. T. Thayer, of Chautauguay, N. Y., had asked a power company for "expense money" threw into sharp focus the utility fight in the New York State Legislature.

Thayer's letters, addressed to officers of the Associated Gas & Electric Co. and its subsidiary, the J. G. White Management Corporation, included references to Thayer's service to the utility groups in the legislature and referred to "the fact that many detrimental bills which were introduced we were able to kill in my committee."

The disclosures came in the midst of Gov. Herbert H. Lehman's intensive drive for action on his 12-point program to regulate Public Utilities in New York State. Nine bills carying out the Governor's plan were introduced in the Legislature January 22, but have not been reported out of committees.

Gov. Lehman made "an appeal to the people" in a broadcast address Monday, urging voters to put pressure on Senators and Assemblymen "so powerful as to overwhelm any opposition that may be mustered by Public Utility companies."

The Associated Gas company is one of the corporations charged by W. Kingsland Macy, Republican State chairman, last year as being part of the "Power Trust" which he alleged dominates the upstate section of the party.

Senator Thayer was quoted by the New York World-Telegram as denying that payment of "expense money" constituted recompense for his services in the Legislature, but said "if they have some letters down there bearing my name I guess they must be mine. But I just don't recollect them."

Capitol Hill Speculating On New Taxes

President's Action After Pay Defeat Waited by Legislators.

Capitol Hill yesterday speculated—and it was nothing more than that—as to whether President Roosevelt would demand that Congress impose new taxes to supply the Treasury with $228,000,000 which the increased compensation to veterans and Government employes will cost under the independent offices appropriation bill passed over his veto.

Opinion as to whether the President should adopt this course appeared to be divided. One group of Administration leaders held it was not necessary and that if the President asked for new taxes he might run into further trouble on Capitol Hill, with adjournment of Congress delayed for many weeks.

But there was another school of thought, which contended that unless the President asked now for increased taxes, blaming those who voted to override his veto, he would have to take the responsibility for a continuing unbalanced budget and would be precluded from placing the blame on the veterans bloc if he fails to make good his promise to bring about a balanced budget for the 1936 fiscal year.

Byrns Foresees Added Levy.

Representative Joseph W. Byrns, Democratic leader of the House, said he did not know what the President would do, but that it was "possible" he might ask for additional levies. It was suggested amendments providing new taxes might be made to the revenue bill, which late yesterday was made the unfinished business of the Senate.

But Senator Harrison, chairman of the Finance Committee and in charge of that measure, said he would not be a party to proposing any new levies as a part of that bill. He pointed out the bill, chiefly designed to plug loopholes in existing law, but also imposing some new taxes, would produce about $330,000,000 additional revenue, or $72,000,000 more than when the bill passed the House.

He maintained that this excess revenue, over and above what originally was expected from the bill's provisions, plus increased taxes due to a pick-up in business would be sufficient to cover any additional burden on the budget resulting from the overriding of the veto.

Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson said he was without information as to whether the President was of the opinion that the expenditures flowing from the veterans and pay legislation would unbalance the budget and whether the President wanted additional taxes levied. He said, however, he knew the President regards the maintenance of a balanced budget as of "great importance."

LaFollette Maps Boost Plan.

Should Mr. Roosevelt express a desire for more taxes, Senator LaFollette (Republican), Wisconsin, has a plan ready for him. He would increase the normal income tax from 4 to 6 per cent and would impose surtaxes, beginning at 6 per cent on income between $4,000 to $8,000, and ranging up to 71 per cent on net incomes in excess of $1,000,000. In general the LaFollette schedules would increase the income tax rates by about 50 per cent.

Whether the President asks for new taxes or not, Senator LaFollette proposes to urge his amendment on the Senate next week when consideration of the tax bill starts. The Senate recessed until Monday noon after making the tax bill its unfinished business yesterday.

The LaFollette proposal was offered in the finance committee, but was rejected 13 to 5. Unless the President issues a call for new taxes it is doubtful whether the Senate will accept his amendment.

This situation is one reason why some observers do not think President Roosevelt will insist on additional taxes. Just as soon as he does the Progressives will urge that the increases be piled on incomes in the higher brackets, a course unacceptable to the more conservative members of Congress.

They would counter with proposals for a general sales tax or new excise taxes, which are unacceptable to the Progressives.

Shy in Campaign Year.

In the end Congress might decide to leave the budget unbalanced and go home to campaign for re-election. Congress has seldom imposed new substantial taxes during a campaign year.

The budget, even when only ordinary revenues and ordinary receipts are compared, is not balanced for this year, and it is doubtful whether it will be on June 30. The Treasury's daily balance statement on its face shows a surplus in receipts, but this is not an accurate picture of the Government's fiscal condition.

The Treasury statement for March 27 shows that receipts during this fiscal year have totaled $2,294,874,858 or about $790,000,000 more than in the corresponding period of the last fiscal year. It shows that ordinary expenditures for this fiscal year have totaled $1,986,882,000, or about $308,000,000 less than receipts.

Included in the ordinary expenditures, however, is only $51,976,000 as a payment into the sinking fund. On the corresponding day of last year payments into the sinking fund totaled $418,764,000. Thus the payments into the sinking fund required by statue have been deferred, but before the fiscal year ends these will have to be made up, thus wiping out any bookkeeping surplus which now exists.

If no distinction is made between so-called ordinary and the so-called emergency expenditures of the Treasury, the total spent by the Government since last July 1 is $4,772,811,675 or $2,477,936,000 in excess of receipts. That sum represents the Treasury deficit so far.

When the independent offices appropriation bill became law at 10:50 a. m. yesterday when Col. Edwin A. Halsey, secretary to the Senate, affixed his name to the measure with the inscription that it had been passed over the President's veto by a two-thirds vote, the executive departments set to work to make its provisions effective.

French Police Hunt American In Paris Killing

Two Argentines Sought; Stavisky Death Held to Be Suicide.

Paris, March 29 (AP).—A mysterious American whose name was given as Johnson was sought tonight for questioning about the slaying on February 21 of Judge Albert Prince, who knew too much about the $40,000,000 Stavisky pawnshop bond scandal.

It was learned police were on his trail after the arrests and grilling of two men—who were charged later with murder—the detention of a third suspect in Marseille, and the announcement that two Argentines also were sought.

The American was supposed to have frequented the same night club as did those arrested.

Experts, meanwhile, concluded after a second autopsy that Serge Stavisky, master swindler and founder of the Bayonne pawnshop, had committed suicide when police closed in on his Chamonix hideaway January 8.

Their findings refuted public charges that Stavisky had been killed by police to keep his mouth shut. The collapse of the Bayonne institution and the subsequent accusations of official and judicial laxity led to fatal street riots in February, the downfall of two cabinets and a bloody trail of murder and suicide.

NRA Settles Budd Walkout On Auto Basis

settled last Sunday that the Budd plant was included. The company was not a party to the negotiations nor was theer anything in the automobile settlement that indicated hat it settled more than the controversy immediately involved. President Roosevelt did indicate, however, that the terms of the settlement constituted a policy of the Administration and settlemen of he Budd controversy bears out that indication.

The Budd controversy, which has been in existence since last November, when 3,000 employes walked out, has been one of the most serious disputes confronting NRA and the National Labor Board. While the number of employes was comparatively small, the principle involved threatened the Government's labor policy.

Question Is Identical.

The question was almost identical with that in the automobile industry, involving a dispute between a company union and a union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. In the final settlement, the Federation again lost, as it did in the automobile controversl, through the Government's recognition of a company union on an equal basis with the outside union.

Both sides in the Budd controversy made charges of coercion. The labor federation charged that the company, in an election last September, coerced employes into favoring the company union, and the company charged the federation with coercion.

Early this month another election was held, without men on strike being allowed to vote. The result was a vote of 3 to 2 in favor of a compnay union and against an A. F. of L. union. This was not satisfactory to NRA and another poll was ordered. This was taken while negotiations resulting in the automobile agreement were going on. A majority still favored the company union.

At one time, the Labor Board requested that action be taken against the Budd Co. on charges iof violating the automobile code, but no definite action was started.

Coast Oil Producers In $10,000,000 Suit

Los Angeles, March 29 (AP).—The Standard Oil Co. and other large producing concerns in the north dome section of the Kettleman Hills field were named defendants today in a damage suit involving potential oil production valued at $10,000,000 or more.

Ervin S. Armstrong, James E. Babcock, F. C. Dougherty and Louise C. Moons filed the suit, setting forth they were owners of oil and gas prospecting permits issued by the Government in 1928-1929 and assigned to the Standard and other producers on a percentage basis.

Ickes Opposes U. S. Oil Cases In California

Secretary Deplores Code Violation Indictments as Aid to Chaos.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes yesterday issued a flat statement of disagreement with the Department of Justice in the matter of indictments recently returned in California against a large number of oil companies and their officers.

It has been understood for some time that the Secretary, who is the Administrator of the important Petroleum Code, was in disagreement with the Justice Department regarding alleged violations of the code. A cartel proposed by him for the Pacific coast oil trade was held up by the Department, which then obtained indictments against oil companies in California, including the Standard Oil Co. of California, charging code infractions.

"Newspaper articles that have appeared during the last few days, especially in California," the Secretary's statement said, "demonstrate that there is some misunderstanding of my attitude with respect to the recent indictments voted by a Federal grand jury in the southern district of California, against certain oil companies and officials, for alleged violation of the oil code.

"To clear up the matter, I may say that I do not agree with the policy of the United States Attorney for the Southern District of California in seeking these indictments. In my judgment, this action has not helped the proper and orderly administration of the oil code.

"It is my belief that the cartel which I promulgated in February would have gone far to solve the difficulties of the oil industry in California. It would have done away with destructive price wars. It would have assured against overproduction of crude oil. It would have put the operation of the oil industry in that territory on a profitable basis.

"By doing these things it would have contributed to the recovery program of the President. These indictments have had the effect of once more throwing the oil industry on the Pacific Coast into a state of chaos."

House Orders Wirt Charges Investigation

Rainey to Name Board of 5 Monday; 'Cowardly,' Says McGugin.

sponsored the resolution passed by the House.

Only $500 was appropriated to finance the investigation, a second resolution authorizing the regular Capitol stenographic staff to report the proceedings.

Issue Hidden, Says McGugin.

Representative Harold McGugin (Republican), Kansas, led the short fight to force a wider inquiry into the charges. He charged a "shameful and hypocritical cover-up," and "a cowardly effort to smother the issues presented by Dr. Wirt."

He said he wanted members of the President's staff called to tell what they knew about remarks comparing Mr. Roosevelt with Kerensky, made to the President in Warm Springs, Ga., but Representative Bulwinkle said the resolution would not authorize their appearance.

"In common justice to the President and to to the people," said McGugin, "Prof. Raymond Moley, Marvin McIntyre, the President's secretary; George W. Christians and Walter M. Higgins (agitators for monetary reform who heard the Kerensky statement) should be made to give the true facts to the people of this country."

The McGugin proposal was fought by Democratic Leader Joseph W. Byrns, who declared the resolution was broader than the originall proposal indorsed by the Kansan.

"A Democratic committee has proposed this resolution," said Byrns. "There is no disposition to cover up anything. On the contrary, we want to bring out into the open those persons who are guilty, if there are any, so they can be dealt with."

Fish Adds to List.

Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., (Republican), New York, who recently made public a list of Government officials he said are associated with the American Civil Liberties Union, which he declared had Communistic leanings, added several new names to the list in a speech on the floor. They included Donald Richber, council of NRA; Robert Fechner, of the Civilian Conservation Corps, and Dr. Leo Wolman, of the National Labor Board.

Representative George Foulkes (Democrat), Michigan, took the floor to answer him.

"Hamilton Fish moans about radical tendencies and progressives in the Government service," Foulkes said. "After his laughable affair of discovering cabbages and carrots in a Baltimore warehouse, where he thought the Communists had hidden bombs, he ought to have learned a bit of sense.

"May I say to him that we are going to get more radical tendencies and more radical legislation, instead of less. I have a suspicion that the time is not far distant when the Government must take over industries and run them, ending exploitation by private interests."

Foulkes said Dr. Wirt had wired him the names of the "Brain Trusters," but declined to disclose them except before the special committee "at the proper time."

He referred to Dr. Wirt as "a kindly, old gentleman who has been misled."

But from Gary, Ind., United Press dispatches reported a denial from Dr. Wirt that he had revealed "to him or to anyone else the identity of my informants."

U. S. Chamber Head Attacks Wagner Bill

Harriman Warns Senate Group Effect Would Be "Disastrous."

Passage of the Wagner labor disputes bill would have "disastrous effect" on American economic life, Henry I. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, warned the Senate Labor Committee yesterday.

One of the high points of the hearing came with a colloquy between Senator James J. Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, and W. B. Bell, Washington, president of the Manufacturing Chemists Association, over the possibility of an American dictatorship.

Bell testified when trade unions were permitted to "run wild" in Italy, the people were forced to "choose between chaos and anarchy on one side and a dictatorship on the other."

"I have watched 50 years of American problems," Davis interposed, "and I am convinced we never will have a dictator."

Harriman stressed the importance of President Roosevelt's interpretation of Section 7A, the National recovery act labor provision, offered in settling the threatened automobile industry strike.

Ruling Is Praised.

"The President's statement in the first place," Harriman contended, "emphasized the necessity for absolute freedom of choice of the employe in the choosing of his representatives for collective bargaining. The President sets up a plan of proportional representation in the formation of the committee that is to deal with the employers. A bare majority for the shop organization or for the outside union is not to disfranchise the minority. Each group is to be given a representation on the employes' committee in proportion to its numerical strength among the employes. Nothing could be fairer.

"In the second place, the employe is to be free from coercion from all sources, including both employer and labor organization.

"In the third place, a special arbitration board is made up, under National recovery act auspices, to hear complaints and to settle disputes. It is perfectly apparent that this manner of handling disputes will reduce greatly the work of a formal labor board."

Harriman objected the bill would legalize the strike, but prohibit an employer from closing a shop when unable to agree with his workers.

"Still again," he added, "the act legalizes the closed shop, but denies the employer the right to carry on a real open shop; that is, a shop which does not discriminate for or against a man because of his affiliation or lack of affiliation with a labor organization."

Summarizes Objections.

The chamber president summarized his objections as:

"1. The bill seems entirely unnecessary in view of the very broad interpretation given to section 7A of the recovery act by the President in his settlement of the threatened automobile strike. All that is needed is a short amendment to section 7A of the recovery act, protecting the employe from coercion, either by the employers, labor organizations or others.

"2. The labor provisions of the recovery act should not be made permanent until the whole act is reconsidered, prior to its expiration in June, 1935.

"3. The bill would tend to separate, rather than to bring together, the employer and the employe and would enlarge, rather than diminish, the possibilities of labor friction.

"4. If changes are required in the administrative features of the recovery act they should be made as amendment to the act, on the request of its administrator.

"5. The composition of the proposed labor board is undesirable. It would be a partisan rather than a judicial body.

"6. The methods under which the proposed labor board would act are unusual, unethical and, in my opinion, illegal.

"7. The act probably is unconstitutional."

Kahn's 'First Love' Was Art

Wall Street Rivals Amazed at Talented Financier's Interest in Opera; Intimate of Harriman in Rail Wars; Son of German Banker.

New York, March 29 (U.P.).—Otto Herrman Kahn might well be called the "man who made Wall street art conscious."

His personality was of a strange blend—strange at least to Wall street's money masters, who could not understand how a man with Kahn's genius for business could find time to devote to the arts.

"A promising chap if he only will forget that art nonsense," said the elder Stillman of Kahn back in the late 90's.

But Kahn never forgot. Business and estheticism were fused in his personality by heritage. His father's home in Mannheim Germany, where Kahn was born on February 21, 1867, was the center of the art life of the town. One of his brothers became a musician.

Father a Banker.

The elder Kahn, Bernhard, was a banker, who became a naturalized American citizen after he fled to the United States following the Baden revolution of 1848 in which he participated and was condemned to die. Bernhard Kahn returned to Germany after an amnesty was declared, remained there and married Emma Eberstadt, cultured daughter of a wealthy family.

Otto Kahn was one of eight children, and his father chose him to follow in his footsteps. Accordingly, at 17, after he had completed his education at the Classical High School, young Kahn was sent to a banking house at Karlsruhe. There he learned the rudiments of banking, such as cleaning out inkwells and bringing in sausages and beer for the senior clerks.

In after life he remarked that his Karlsruhe clerkship provided "a useful and salutary training, for it taught discipline, thoroughness and order and the doing of any job, however modest, to the best of one's ability.

Advanced Rapidly.

During his three years at Karlsruhe, he advanced rapidly, but never allowed business to smother his other ideals. He learned to play several stringed instruments and attended the opera and lectures on painting. Then came the call to military duty and for a year he served in a regiment of Hussars. This, perhaps, accounted for his characteristic precise stride and his erect posture.

After a brief service in a Berlin bank, he was sent to London, where for five years he held various responsible positions in the Deutsche Bank's branch, of which he finally became vice manager.

Met Harriman.

Four years after coming to America Kahn met Edward H. Harriman, and became his closest associate and coworker in railroad financial transactions of the greatest magnitude.

Kahn soon came to be known as an authority on practical economics, taxation and international affairs. The late Theodore Roosevelt said in 1918 he knew of "no sounder economic thinker in this country nowadays than Otto Kahn."

Under his guidance, Kuhn, Loeb & Co. grew to be one of the largest private banking houses in the world. He was a director of the Equitable Trust Co. of New York, Los Angeles and Salt Lake R. R. Co., and chairman of the finance and currency committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York. He was a trustee of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Rutgers College and Carnegie Institute of Technology.

Nine in Gaming Raids Freed By Grand Jury

Gambling Campaign Given Setback by Refusal to Indict.

The Police Department's antigambling campaign received a repulse yesterday when the District grand jury declined to indict nine men who were arrested in three raids early in the month.

Armed with "observation" warrants, police descended upon alleged gambling places at 1407 G street northwest, 1409 G street northwest and 915 Ninth street northwest. They arrested the nine men as either employes or principals, and took to the station houses several score persons found in the places.

Each "customer" was required to post a $100 bond for his release as a Government witness, and many were held for hours because they were unable to furnish bonds at once.

Police backed vans up to the raided premises and carted away large quantities of furniture.

District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett refused to comment on the failure to indict.

Diplomats' Pay Relief Speeded

$7,438,000 Aid Fund for Foreign Service Is Requested.

A supplemental deficiency estimate of $7,438,000 was sent to the House yesterday by the White House upon recommendation of the Budget Bureau to pay foreign service employes of the Government for losses sustained by depreciation of the American dollar abroad.

The estimate, which provides compensation from July 15, 1933, to June 30, this year, would carry into effect the act signed on March 26.

Officers and enlisted men of the military and naval services, as well as the staffs of embassies and consular offices, would benefit by the appropriation in accordance with the extent of the American dollar's depreciation in relation to the currency of the country in which they reside.

Adjustments will be made under regulations being drafted by the President.

Charles Town Raid Hits Booking Agency

Otto H. Kahn, Banker, Lover Of Fine Arts, Is Heart Victim

families, including the Astors, Vanderbilts and Morgans.

In November, 1931, he resigned as chairman of the board of directors, and was succeeded by Paul D. Cravath, a prominent attorney. Kahn retained his membership in the directorate.

The international banker's connections in music circles brought him into legal tangles on several occasions. He was sued for breach of contract by two singers, Lydia Landgren, Swedish soprano, and Rosalinda Morini. Both actions were settled.

Supporter of Music.

Aside from his financial activities and his constant aid, both in time and money, to the Metropolitan, Kahn found opportunity to aid music activities in other cities.

He was instrumental in founding the Chicago Civic and Boston Grand Opera Companies, and annually, for many years, journeyed to Chicago to attend the outdoor performances at Ravinia Park, on the shores of Lake Michigan—a company maintained by his close friend, Louis Eckstein.

In the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. Kahn was associated in control with the Warburgs and the Schiffs.

Since the death several years ago of his close friend, Mortimer Schiff, his visits to the banking house had been less frequent.

In Wall street circles, it was said Kahn's practical retirement came with the lessening of the influence of international banking and financial operations in 1927 and 1928.

Like many of these operations—some of which, like the Northern Pacific Railroad "corner" in 1901, carried him into battles with the house of Morgan—Kahn's manner of life was international.

Son of Rich Banker.

Too, his career was not that of a poor youth risen to riches. Luxury had always been his.

The son of Bernard Kahn—a banker of Mannheim who fled from Germany to the United States after participation in the Revolution of 1848 and then returned 10 years after—Kahn was thoroughly educated in Germany, then entered the banking house of his father.

He went to London later to work in the English branch of the Deutsche Bank, visited America in 1893 on a business trip, returned to New York a year later to join the firm of Speyer & Co., and in 1896 joined the Kuhn, Loeb firm.

From the start, his shrewd ability, his quick grasp of details, his quiet manner of operation was felt "in the street."

In 1901, he engineered, with the late Edward H. Harriman, the famous "corner" on Northern Pacific stock. James J. Hill and the Morgan interests were seeking to retain control. Suddenly, Harriman and Kahn appeared with the majority of the stock, forced it up to $1,000 a share, and made enormous profits.

Crossed Ocean Often.

The Kuhn, Loeb firm always maintained a position of prominence in international banking. And Kahn was one of the most frequent travelers across the Atlantic.

With the coming of the World War and America's entrance, Kahn became a naturalized citizen in 1917. Friends described Kahn's viewpoint frequently as English, as opposed to German. Since leaving Germany in his early years, he had preferred the English and American ways to those of his native land.

A distinguished-looking man, although small of stature, he was cerect to every detail. While others who had boxes at the Metropolitan discarded the flowing opera cape, Kahn kept his.

At the opera, as everywhere else, he avoided crowds and the limelight. He would enter the Metropolitan by the business office entrance, slip through a passageway and enter his box unnoticed.

Morgan Pays Call.

Kahn's death came in the last week of the Metropolitan season. Around the "Met," it was considered probable that a memorial would be held at one of the three remaining performances.

At the William street entrance to the banking house in which he was partner, the flag was lowered to half-staff.

Shortly before 4 p. m., J. P. Morgan and two of his partners, Thomas W. Lamont and Russell Leffingwell, called at the Kuhn, Loeb offices and remained for five minutes.

Mrs. Kahn, the former Addie Wolfe, heard the news of her husband's death in the mansion at 1100 Fifth avenue. With her was one of their two sons, Roger Wolfe Kahn, who abandoned the career of his father to achieve fame as a dance band leader.

Word was immediately sent to the three other children: Mrs. John C. O. Marriott, Miss Margaret D. Kahn and Gilbert Kahn, who followed his father in the banking field.

Capt. Skaggs Killed in Fall From Airplane

Death of Former Aid at Walter Reed Probed in Texas.

Capt. R. H. Skaggs, 37, flight surgeon at Randolph Field, Tex., and former staff physician at Walter Reed Hospital, was killed as the result of a mysterious fall from the cockpit of a plane piloted by Lieut. Samuel W. Van Meter, the War Department announced yesterday.

The department explained that when Lieut. Van Meter landed Wednesday night, after a training flight to Laredo, Tex., he was startled to find that his passenger was missing. Capt. Skaggs' body was found later in a field a short distance from Randolph Field.

A board of officers has been appointed to investigate the accident, the War Department said.

Capt. Skaggs was graduated from the Army Medical School here in 1926, and reported to Randolph Field from Walter Reed Hospital, where he was a member of the staff from April, 1931, to September, 1933.

He was born February 15, 1897, at Lampasas, Tex. Graduating from Texas Christian University in 1918, he received his degree in medicine from Baylor Medical College, at Dallas, in 1921.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Catherine Mickley Skaggs, and two sons, of Winters, Tex.

300 Tax Evasion Cases Prepared

Not Yet Ready for Grand Jury, Cummings Says.

The Department of Justice is preparing income tax evasion cases against 300 more persons, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings announced yesterday.

None of the cases is ready as yet for presentation to grand juries, he said. They concern evasions of all sizes, he indicated.

The Attorney General said that deficiency tax assessments had not been returned against Andrew W. Mellon, Thomas W. Sidlo, Thomas S. Lamont and former Mayor James J. Walker of New York, recently named as evading payments on income taxes. Ordinarily deficiency assessments are levied against persons held to be withholding payment before their cases are presented to a grand jury.

Brandt Seeks AAA Hearing, Pike Declares

Secretary Wallace's Plan to View Evidence Meets Approval.

The proposal of Secretary Wallace that John Brandt, of Minneapolis, be asked to present evidence supporting his statement that Wallace declined to make full payment for relief butter Brandt's company bought for the Government was greeted with approval yesterday by Roy M. Pike, chairman of the Cooperative Dairy Defense Committee.

In the absence of Brandt, who is in Minneapolis, Pike declared that Brandt would welcome the opportunity to appear at such an investigation.

"Present activities of the Agricultural Adjustmant Administration definitely are designed to destroy cooperative marketing," Pike said.

Chester C. Davis, farm administrator, said a plan for the proposed hearing will be presented to Wallace soon.

Brandt's charges were made in a speech last week before dairy cooperative leaders. He said Wallace failed to keep an oral contract to pay the Land O'Lakes Creamery cost plus handling charges on butter bought for the Government prior to incorporation of the Dairy Marketing Corporation.

Wallace said he was pleased by the reaction to the new dairy production control program and that he did not believe the resolutions adopted by the cooperative leaders' meeting reflected any general sentiment among dairymen.

Wallace said that Wisconsin would lead all other States in distribution of benefit payments under legislation now pending.

The bill provides for reduction in dairy output of 10 per cent under 1932 and 1933, in return for which producers would be paid 40 cents for each pound of butter fat reduced.

Figures for other States are: Minnesota, $12,570,000; New York, $12,195,000; Iowa, $9,240,000; Illinois, $7,140,000; Pennsylvania, $7,110,000; California, $6,900,000; Michigan, $6,435,000; Ohio, $6,360,000; Missouri, $5,085,000; Indiana, $4,950,000; Texas, $4,440,000.

Catlett Given Senate Approval in Bank Job

The Senate yesterday confirmed Fred W. Catlett, of Washington State, as a member of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, and William T. Mahoney as United States marshal in Alaska, the Associated Press reported.

The Senate also confirmed Leslie Frazer, of Salt Lake City, as Assistant Commissioner of Patents.

Cherry Bloom Fete Delayed To April 19

Date Let Forward as Buds Fail to Blossom in Tardy Spring.

Tardy arrival of spring weather yesterday caused postponement of Washington's first annual Cherry Blossom Festival until April 19, 20 and 21.

Official announcement came from the parade committee after a conference of various interested groups. The fete was to have been held April 12, 13 and 14.

No date has been forecast for the first appearance of the blossoms. Albert Clyde-Burton, official forecaster, surveyed Tidal Basin trees yesterday.

Floats, representing foreign embassies, events in American history, will be in the gala procession taken part in by commercial houses, patriotic societies and newspapers. Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, debutante daughter of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Henry Roosevelt, will be "queen."

Several floats were pledged to the procession yesterday. The list of participants is headed by the Japanese Embassy.

Virginia CWA Halted Pending Pay Roll Survey

Examination Will Precede Transfer to New Relief Set-up.

Richmond, March 29 (AP).—All Civil Works Administration projects in Virginia were ordered suspended for one week, beginning Monday, by William A. Smith, administrator, today, in order that officials might check pay rolls before switching CWA workers to the work division of the Virginia Emergency Relief Administration.

The suspension was ordered so that relief directors may make a personnel inspection of all workers to see if they conform to VERA qualifications.

There are now about 22,500 persons on State CWA pay rolls. What percentage will go to the new set-up will not be known until after the check is completed.

The new relief program is divided into four classifications.

The first bracket will be work relief in cities and towns of 5,000 population. Present enterprises will be continued with payment in cash or kind, at the discretion of the director.

The second bracket embraces subsistence garden projects in all localities, with seed, fertilizer and supervision supplied by the VERA.

The third classification will be a rural rehabilitation plan, including the placing of families in homes with land, live stock, poultry and farm tools supplied, to enable them to earn their living from the soil.

In the fourth grouping will be direct relief to all persons physically unable to provide for themselves.

Pastor Upheld In Resigning

Winchester Gains Norfolk Minister Through Presbytery Vote.

He will go to the Winchester church, which had called. He resigned early this month, but his congregation refused to acept the resignation. Under the canons of the Presbyterian Church, a minister may not assume a new pastorate until the presiding presbytery allows his resignation.

Action was taken by the presbytery after a lengthy debate, in which representatives of the Lafayette and the Winchester churches appeared.

The congregation of Loudoun Street Presbyterian Church, at Winchester, heard with pleasure the decision to release the Rev. McGukin.

Berry E. Clark 4th Trial Jury Is Deadlocked

Embezzlement Case Given Jurors at 11:45 A. M. on First of 97 Charges.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Ellicott City, Md., March 29.—The fourth jury to try Berry E. Clark, former clerk to the Montgomery County Commissioners, on the first of 97 embezzlement indictments, apparently was deadlocked here tonight.

Clark is being tried on a specific charge of embezzling $426 in county funds. Three previous trials, held in Montgomery County, resulted in hung juries.

The jury left the courtroom at 11:45 a. m., after listening for 1 hour and 50 minutes to State Senator Joseph F. Donovan, of the defense, and for an hour and 5 minutes to State's Attorney James Clark, of Howard County.

Judge William H. Forsythe, jr., Fifth Judicial Circuit, told the jury it had but one of two courses to follow: To find the defendant either guilty or not guilty.

Rumor in the century-old courthouse here tonight had the jury deadlocked, 7 to 5.

Sandwiches and coffee were given the jury at 5 p. m., after Judge Forsythe personally had inspected them to see that no messages were inclosed.

It is expected that the judge will dismiss the jury if no decision is reached by midnight.

Peery Signs 43 Measures; Scores Wait

Trial Justice, Pay Bills Most Important to Get Signature.

Richmond, March 29 (AP).—Gov. George C. Peery today signed the important trial justice and salary bills as he worked rapidly against time in order that all measures he approves get signed before Friday midnight, the deadline.

The justice bill provides that trial justices be named by Circuit Court judges in all Virginia counties where they are not in office at the present time. Salaries are to be fixed by the boards of supervisors and, in thinly populated areas, counties may join in forming a "trial justice district", presided over by one justice. The bill means the end of trials by justices of the peace.

Closely allied to it is the salary bill, which also became a law today. It institutes a new system of remuneration for certain county, city and town officials and does away with fees they have hitherto received.

The Hopewell charter bill, a local measure, provides for certain changes in that document.

Several score of bills, including the budget bill still remained unsigned tonight.

Among 43 bills which the Governor signed today was the police radio bill, appropriating $75,000 per year for two years for creation of a police radio system on a Statewide basis.

A bill providing that candidates for State bar examinations must have either a degree from a law school recognized by the bar examiners or have had academic work equal to two years in college, was signed.

Bills allowing corporation commission to increase charges for bank examinations and establishing a commission to report to the next Assembly on the advisability of redistricting judicial circuits were signed.

By terms of another bill signed today, cursing, swearing or drinking in public is made punishable by a fine of not less than $1 nor more than $10. A bill permitting the taking of sponge crabs between April 1 and June 30 was signed and an emergency clause makes it effective today.

Women's Clubs To Plant Trees At State House

Replica at St. Marys City to Be Surrounded by Shrubs and Roses.

Leonardtown, Md., March 29 (Spl.).—The Federated Garden Clubs of Maryland, of which Mrs. W. Bladen Lowndes is president, have appropriated $1,200 for buying boxwood and roses to be planted around the tercentenary replica of the State House of 1676, now under construction at St. Marys City.

The English boxwood will edge the walks surrounding the State House, and the roses, which are a special Chinese variety, known as Rosa Hugonis, will be planted in groups throughout the grounds.

The planting will be supervised by a special committee, composed of Mrs. Charles F. Peace, of the Severn River Garden Club, chairman; Mrs. Heyward E. Boyce, Roland Park Club; Mrs. Walter Wilcox, Chevy Chase Club; Mrs. William M. Marbury, Amateur Gardeners' Club; Mrs. Maiston, Severn River Club; Mrs. John McHenry, Green Spring Valley Club; Mrs. J. Crossan Cooper, Garden Club of Twenty; Mrs. Edward L. Palmer, Gibson Island Club; Mrs. German H. Emory, Cliff Dwellers Garden Club; Mrs. F. Waidner, Forest Park Club, and Mrs. Luther B. Benton, Garden Section, Women's Club of Roland Park.

Trees to surround the State House are being bought from a special fund, to which the Southern Maryland Society has contributed the first $250. Only species of trees indigent to Maryland are being selected, such as holly oak, cedars and other evergreens.

For the interior of the building the Maryland State Society, D. A. R., has commissioned R. M. Mackal, prominent Baltimore artist, to do an oil painting of Mistress Margaret Brent and another painting depicting the granting of the Maryland Charter.

The Maryland Society of Colonial Dames, of which Mrs. Duncan K. Brent is president, will donate a portrait bust of Leonard Calvert, first Governor of the province, to the State House. It will be the work of Hans Schuler, Nationally known sculptor and director of the Maryland Institute of Art and Design, and will be wrought in bronze.

Maryland Crop Loans Passed

$1,250,000 Is Available for Farmers in Six Counties.

Frederick, Md., March 29 (Spl.). Officials of the Frederick Production Credit Association, comprising Frederick, Washington, Carroll, Montgomery and Garrett Counties, yesterday approved of a number of applications for loans.

More than 100 applications, totaling about $75,000, have been made.

Those attending the meeting were Thomas S. Anderson, secretary-treasurer, and Alvie M. Etzler, Frederick County; Thomas C. Darby, president, Montgomery County; E. A. Shoemaker, Carroll County, and E. H. Ingram, Washington County.

While Allegany and Garrett Counties are not represented on the directorate and were not represented at the meeting, inspectors have been appointed for both counties and applications for loans received. Frederick County heads the list of applications.

Announcement was made that about $1,250,000 will be available for farmers of the six counties. The loans are made on personal property, live stock, implements and crops, the maturity of loans approximating the marketing period of the crop or live stock financed.

Eight loans, approximately $23,000, were made yesterday at the local office of the Home Owners Corporation. At present 36 mortgage acceptances, aggregating $120,000, have been closed.

Anne Arundel Fines Are Issue in Fight

Claimed by Both State and County Laws.

Annapolis, Md., March 29 (Spl.). Because of a conflict between State and county laws governing disposition of costs in magistrate's cases, Anne Arundel County officials may be compelled to turn over to the State approximately $2,000, recently returned by county magistrates to the county commissioners.

Benjamin Michaelson, counsel to the county board, today directed attention to the conflict. The State law, he said, requires magistrates to send traffic fines to the State motor vehicle commissioner within five days after their collection, whereas the local law requires them to send fines and costs in all criminal cases to the county commissioners.

Until a ruling is made, magistrates plan to remit them to the county board.

St. Marys City Tercentenary Pageant In June Will Reproduec Old Manor Life

Pageant Author Reveals Details of Ceremony Climaxing Rites.

Costumes, Speech, Scenes and Atmosphere to Be Depicted.

By Marion Butler.

"St. Maries, the Mother of Maryland," is the title just given to the huge pageant to be held at St. Marys City, Md., June 16, climaxing Maryland's celebration of her 300th anniversary.

Before President Roosevelt and 80,000 spectators on that date, the heroic figures of Maryland early history will step out of the past to reenact roles which they played there three centuries ago in the making of a State.

Leonard Calvert will disembark from the Ark to treaty once more with the Yaocomico Indians and buy with beads, spoons, and cloth the settlement site for his colonists high on the river bluffs. Stately Margaret Brent will be there, and Sir Thomas Cornwaleys again will formulate plans for the first grist mill in Maryland.

So faithfully will these characters of old be reproduced in action, speech and costume that Mrs. Kathleen Read Coontz, nationally known pageant writer-director whom tercentenary workers commissioned to write the pageant, believes they will resurrect the past for that afternoon.

In an interview yesterday, Mrs. Coontz described the huge three-hour pageant in which she has planned to have 1,000 Marylanders take part.

The pageant will be held in the afternoon, following a water pageant arranged by Swepson Earle, Maryland conservation commissioner. It will take place on the large field between the restored statehouse of 1676 and St. Marys Manor. On this property above St. Marys River, the great log palisade and many of the homes of the first colonists once stood. In recognition of this, the great 55 by 35 foot stage for the pageant will be constructed of logs to resemble the original ancient Indian palisade.

With the arrival of actual-size replicas of the Ark and Dove in the river, and the disembarking of Leonard Calvert and his settlers from the ships, the land pageant will start.

Several hundred Indians, portrayed by Maryland school children, with their skins painted a deep brown and clad in Indian garb, will represent the Yaocomico tribes of old and escort the settlers to the pageant field.

There, the major events of Maryland colonial history from 1634 to the removal of the capital to Annapolis in 1694 will be depicted. In many cases, famous figures of history will be portrayed by their actual descendants, and the cast will include representatives from each of Maryland's 23 counties.

Old Events Recalled.

The quaint figure of George Alsep, one of the earliest of Maryland chroniclers, will conjure up the pageant scenes, according to Mrs. Coontz. These will include: The buying of St. Marys City from the Indians by Gov. Calvert; the missionary work of Father Andrew White, first Jesuit historian of Maryland, among the Indians; the dramatizing of ancient court scenes such as court-barons, court-leets, and quit-rents to the proprietary; pirate raids and Indian encounters; the treaty of peace with the warring Susquehanna and Seneca Indian tribes; the beautiful marriage scene of Charles Calvert with the widow Sewall which Baltimore city will present; colorful gavotte and minuet dances of the early Colonists; and the powerful final scene in which Gov. Francis Nicholson decides to remove the capital to Annapolis and refuses the humble petition of St. Marys City residents for it to remain.

Closing the drama will be a review on horseback of the six Governors who served when St. Marys was the capital of the Province: Leonard Calvert, Thomas Greene, William Stone, Josias Fendall, Phillip Calvert, Charles Calvert (Third Lord Baltimore), Lionel Copley (first Royal Governor), and Francis Nicholson. Both men and horses will be arrayed in the magnificent trappings common to the officials of Colonial days.

Other famous characters who will be portrayed in the pageant are Mistress Margaret Brent, known as the "Portia of Maryland;" Giles Brent, her brother; Thomas Gerard, on Leonard Calvert's council; Capt. Ingle, of piratical fame; and the Indian Emperor, Kittamanquund, of the friendly Pascataway Tribes.

Mrs. Coontz, who has put on many pageants, is particularly enthusiastic about the costuming for this one.

"The suits and dresses of this pageant will be especially interesting," she maintains, "because they will show early Colonial garb which is not nearly so well known as the familiar Revolutionary period costume. For example, the men will not wear the tight, white wigs of Washington's day, but will be seen in natural-colored, loosely waved perukes of shoulder length. They will affect the wide lace collars, plumed hats, swinging capes, and deeply cuffed boots of the early seventeenth century."

The school children who will play Indian parts will make their own costumes under the supervision of their teachers, Mrs. Coontz said, explaining that the Maryland schools had aided in this way in previous pageants which she has put on in Charles County. Already, many are busy making beaded belts on hand looms, and contriving knives, shields and drums in their craft shops.

Among others who are working on the pageant preparations with Mrs. Coontz are: The St. Marys County Chapter of the D. A. R.; the St. Marys County Branch of the American Legion; parochial and public schools of the county; St. Marys County Women's Rural Clubs; members of State and county tercentenary committees; State Senator J. Allan Coade, of Porto Bello; Mrs. Colin Burch, Mrs. L. V. Maddox, Griffith Alexander, of California, Md.; A. F. King, editor of the St. Marys County Beacon; Dr. Charles V. Hayden, Miss Lettie M. Dent, county superintendent of public schools, and numbers of Southern Maryland residents.

The pageant will be the result of months of research by Mrs. Coontz in both the rare book room at the Library of Congress and the archives division of the Maryland Historical Society at Baltimore.

Much of her material, she says, was obtained direct from the famous Calvert letters. From these, and rare volumes of the seventeenth century, the utterances of the famous figures, and all ancient proclamations read in the pageant will be authentically presented to modern listeners just as they were made in colonial days.

Wrote Many Pageants.

Mrs. Coontz, who also is a contributor to many magazines and newspapers, took up pageant writing several years ago, when this ancient form of the drama was looked upon as a passing literary fancy. She has seen it grow steadily to one of the most popular forms of the drama in this country. Some of her best known pageants are "Proserpina Comes Back," a spring pageant often presented in Baltimore schools; "Washington Returns," the huge Bicentennial pageant, which was played throughout the country; "Living Pages of Washington's Diary," first presented by the Masons of Washington, and "Neighbor Washington," and "The Magic Weed," two popular Charles County, Md., pageants.

Of the coming tercentenary pageant at St. Marys City, however, Mrs. Coontz states:

"Although I have done pageantry in many parts of the country, I believe that Maryland history lends itself most colorfully to work of this kind, since it was the only one of the 13 colonies in which manors were established, and lords of the manor held the English medieval customs of court-baron and court-leet, the two quaint courts of the manor and of the people."

Maryland Population Gains Foreseen for 23 Counties

Baltimore Growing, but Eastern Shore Drops, Says Commission.

Baltimore, March 29 (Spl.).—Fourteen of Maryland's 23 counties will show population increases in the next 11 years, the State Planning Commission said today. Baltimore also will increase, but nine of the counties, six on the Eastern Shore, will show decreases.

The figures are based on a study of population trends during the past ten years in every section of the State. Upon the estimates will depend much of the work of the Planning Commission during the next ten years.

Maryland's population is estimated at 1,706,930. In 1935 the Planning Commission figures the population will be 1,902,106.

Estimates of 1945 for cities over 5,000 are:

Estimates for counties:

Alleghany, 92,726; Anne Arundel, 72,662; Baltimore, 198,580; Calvert, 9,207; Caroline, 15,505; Carroll, 38,566; Cecil, 29,122; Charles, 13,876; Dorchester, 25,203; Frederick, 57,265; Garrett, 20,250; Harford, 35,043; Howard, 16,676; Kent, 13,075; Montgomery, 70,450; Prince Georges, 95,017; Queen Annes, 12,443; St. Marys, 13,816; Somerset, 21,567; Talbot, 16,995; Washington, 75,088; Wicomico, 35,022, and Worcester, 20,605.

Norfolk, Va., March 30 (AP).—Three men were rescued from the water-logged power boat S. M. Davis in Chesapeake Bay early today by the steamer President Warfield of the old Bay Line. Both boat and men were brought to Norfolk.

About 2½ miles north-northwest of Old Trap Light the lookout on the President Warfield discovered the power boat, sunk almost to the rails.

The rescued men were Capt. Jerry Creighton, Eugene Creighton and Luther Parks, all of Cambridge, Md.

Spinal Meningitis Afflicts 2 Students

Culpeper, Va., March 29 (Spl.). Suffering from an illness which two local physicians diagnosed as spinal meningitis, Janie Jenkins, 12, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lum Jenkins, of Brandy Station, was rushed to University Hospital, Charlottesville, for treatment yesterday.

Shortly after, Larman Nicholls, 17, son of Walter Nicholls, of the same community, entered the hospital with the same disease.

Virginia Road Funds in 1934 Facing Deficit

Slash in Auto Tax Is Held Responsible for Situation.

Richmond, March 29 (AP).—The State highway department will operate on a deficit of $2,669,378.44 during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1934, without the allocation of any funds for primary road system construction, except maintenance of convict camps, the highway commission announced today.

The statement of income and expense showed reduced passenger automobile license taxes cut the department's income sharply, including the necessity for making up $1,500,000 lost under the new law during the current fiscal year period from April 1 to June 30.

Expenditures include $5,952,192.25 for maintenance and construction on the secondary system and $5,000,000 for maintenance of the primary system. When these and other anticipated expenditures are deducted from $16,560,000 available for the department, a balance of $95,621.56 is left.

The commission's statement said the estimated expenditure for the "location and cost" of the 24 convict camps was $2,765,000, leaving an overdraft of $2,669,378.44.

Concluding its statement, the commission said since it was shown there was available for allocation to all construction districts only $95,621.56 the "commission has decided not to hold public hearings for the allocation of this small amount."

April Dog Days.

Dog days will be here next month. One thousand dogs and two days, to be exact! On April 13 and 14 the Washington Kennel Club will hold its annual exhibition, and while not all of the 70-odd "recognized" breeds of dogs will be present, the average person, who thinks a dog is just a dog, will be in for a surprise at the variety of forms into which four legs and two ears can be twisted.

A dog show is a strange place. To the uninitiate it is apt to seem rather dull and very noisy. To the fancier the noise is nothing, and a dull minute doesn't exist. The only way to enjoy a dog show is to take it very seriously, to look very wise, and keep very still. For there exists nowhere a group more jealous of its own lingo and shop-talk than the dog fancier. His world revolves around pedigrees and past performances, formation and faults. His life is made up mainly of talk.

But if the novitiate goes quietly he will have a great deal of fun. If the dogs don't amuse him people will. Behind the idiosyncrasies of human nature that a dog show will bring out there is a wealth of science. What seems like flumdummery to one who doesn't know, is pure science to one who does. The poise, the stance, the coat, the bone, the flesh and the fur of the pedigreed dog are not accidental. It is only consistent and proper breeding that makes a good dog. That's why sometimes the dogs seem so much more human than the man or woman at the other end of the lead.

At This Session.

As the Ways and Means Committee approaches the conclusion of hearings on the Wagner-Lewis unemployment insurance bill, two reasons for its early enactment stand out. First, the issue should be disposed of by both the Federal and State governments while the need for such "social engineering" is apparent to all. Second, passage of the bill at this session of Congress would give the States an opportunity to work out insurance systems of their own with a minimum of delay and irregularity.

Every one recognizes that the Wagner-Lewis bill is not an emergency measure. It will afford no cure for existing unemployment. Experience has shown, however, that long-range planning of this kind is ignored in times of prosperity. In the heyday of our last boom there was a general unwillingness to admit that unemployment could ever be a serious problem for the United States. Had this short-sighted attitude been less engrained we might not have been forced to undertake the most uneconomic system of state relief which the modern world has seen.

A vital consideration in connection with the Wagner-Lewis bill, which would encourage the States to build insurance machinery in accord with varying local conditions, is that a large majority of the State Legislatures will meet next January. If the measure is enacted at the present session of Congress local statutes may be passed at most of the State capitals next winter. State unemployment insurance systems could thus be inaugurated with a reasonable degree of unity, and a reasonably scientific nation-wide system might be achieved with as much expedition as can be expected in a program of such magnitude.

If Congress should fail to act before adjournment, however, many of the States would have no opportunity to consider supplementary legislation until 1937. Of course, considerable time would be required to put the machinery of unemployment insurance into operation. In other words, prompt enactment of the Wagner-Lewis bill, with advisable modifications, is necessary to avoid indefinite delay in our first thoughtful attack upon a social problem which promises to be with us long after business recovery is far advanced.

Continuing Responsibility.

The reluctance of Washington citizens to purchase White Cross Seals for the aid of crippled children may be due in part to the tendency toward appropriation of public funds for such purposes. A few years ago relief agencies were financed largely through public contributions. It is unquestionably true that the extensive substitution of public funds for private charity has discouraged voluntary contributions for some worthy undertakings.

White Cross Seals are being sold by the local Association for Crippled Children and Disabled Adults and the Congress of Parents and Teachers. A fund of $5,000 is sought for the transportation of infantile paralysis victims to Warm Springs, to encourage more adequate clinical treatment as well as physio- and occupational-therapy and to finance a census of cripples in the District. The association handling the fund has no paid workers. Assurance is given that 80 per cent of the revenue obtained from the sale of seals will be devoted to local projects, and the remainder to a national program.

A worthy cause of this kind ought not to suffer because the Government has lifted the responsibility of caring for the unemployed from the shoulders of private contributors.

Post-Mortem.

The question before the Senate was, in the formula used by the Vice President: "Shall the bill pass, the objections of the President of the United States to the contrary notwithstanding?"

Those objections had been succinctly and clearly put in Mr. Roosevelt's veto message. In summarized form they were: (1) The economy act of a year ago, now overthrown, was a basic part of the recovery program because it sought to maintain national credit by means of a balanced budget. (2) The expenditures for emergency relief are not to be confused with those for further veterans' relief because the latter are continuous and permanent expenses. (3) The President considered it vital to sustain the previously enunciated principle that "no person, because he wore a uniform, must therefore be placed in a special class of beneficiaries over and above all other citizens." (4) Already benefit of the doubt was given to veterans in every case where disability allowances were at stake. (5) Elimination of the Federal employes pay cut, tied to the reductions for veterans relief, is not yet fully justified by rising living costs and improved economic conditions.

Only on two of these points could there be effective criticism of the veto message. The case against restoration of the temporary pay cut is obviously without the validity of the case against permanent and indiscriminate largesse to a favored class. It would not have been in the veto message at all except that the legislation mistakenly united the two very different issues. And the argument that the various relief expenditures are purely emergency and nonrecurring is not entirely convincing, though it is comforting to have the President again go strongly on record on this point.

In overriding the veto, however, neither House nor Senate was actuated by deficiencies in the President's argument. Study of the debates, and off-stage conversations, reveal a medley of purposes. First of all, of course, abject surrender to a powerful and aggressive lobby operating with a view to the fall elections. Next, perhaps, a desire to kick over the traces, and show the country that there is still some independence of spirit on the Hill. Finally, a purely partisan ambition on the part of Republican leadership, which could not forego, even for the national welfare, an opportunity to discredit the Administration.

None of these three purposes, however, reacts to the credit of Congress. The time is past when the country can be safely governed by lending an attentive ear to selfish local interests. Troubles will pile upon troubles if our national legislature proves unable to view major problems from the viewpoint of national rather than purely local or class well-being. Nor is there any cause for optimism in an independence of spirit which emerges from the customary lethargy of Congress only when the President is obviously working in the interests of the country as a whole.

As for the Republican position, one comment is sufficient. After missing almost innumerable opportunities to create a constructive opposition that party deliberately chose to attack on an issue in which opposition was destructive. Two Republican Representatives and not one Republican Senator voted to sustain a veto which Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Hoover would alike have favored. Only four Republicans would have been needed to save the day in the Senate Wednesday. But even as few as four were lacking—not in party loyalty but in loyalty to those principles which alone make parties worth preserving.

Use And Abuse Of Propaganda.

President Roosevelt's recent reference to "the definite and highly organized drive" against the bill to regulate the stock exchanges has directed attention to the fact that the campaign in question has been supported by the so-called Committee For the Nation. It is noted that the committee's earlier advocacy of dollar devaluation was not frowned upon officially as insidious propaganda. Certainly there is no justification for the implication that organized opposition to any proposed legislative measure is sufficient ground for condemning it. Intelligent propaganda provides a necessary means of educating public opinion. The arguments favoring or opposing a particular plan or program are not necessarily discredited because those who advance them are selfishly concerned to influence the course of events.

Secretary Morgenthau, too, recently expressed disapproval of the silver bills introduced into the House, alleging that some supporters of these measures were "not disinterested." Instead of basing his objections upon the defects of the bills themselves, he placed the emphasis upon the assumed sinister motives of those urging such legislation. How far is this attitude justified? Should the sources of propaganda for or against any proposal be traced and judgment be influenced by the findings? Or should the reasons pro and con be weighed with complete disregard for the origins of the facts and arguments that support a decision?

Public officials certainly ought not to be influenced in reaching independent judgments concerning a legislative program by the fact that they are being bombarded with pleas from selfishly interested groups. Neither should discredit be cast upon open and honest efforts of organized groups to secure a wider hearing. It is, however, desirable that the untrained public should be informed at all times about the sources of the information that reaches it. Propaganda disguised as disinterested information can and does distort public opinion by its sheer volume, in the absence of counter-propaganda of equal force and weight. Otherwise facts are facts, and good arguments remain good, no matter who acts to bring them to the attention of the people.

Dismal Alternatives.

Every step toward restoration of the air-mail system serves to emphasize the ineptitude of the original cancellation order. The President has recognized the inability of the Army to function efficiently as an air-mail carrier with its present lack of proper equipment and experience. Yet the Government is hampered in its effort to let temporary contracts to private operators by the fact that Postmaster General Farley condemned all former carriers without a hearing. Under the law, as interpreted by the Postoffice Department, that act makes the former carriers ineligible to bid for new contracts, regardless of whether they may be guilty or innocent of charges against them.

Because of this situation the awarding of temporary contracts may prove to be a blunder comparable to pressing the Army into service as a mail carrier. Only four air transport lines now in operation are eligible to bid. Most of them have only meager equipment and very limited experience, if any, in flying the mail. Of course, these companies can not afford to buy expensive planes if they have assurance of only three-month contracts. Capital is not available for such uncertain ventures. And even if equipment were on hand, the lack of experience among companies that have escaped Mr. Farley's blacklist would constitute a major hazard.

No doubt the Administration hopes to avoid difficulties of this sort by inducing the condemned air lines to reorganize and thus acquire eligibility. New companies might be formed, excluding any officials who participated in the 1930 conferences with Postmaster General Brown, to take over the assets and equipment of the former carriers. But this procedure, the operators say, would amount to a false confession of guilt and gross discrimination against the executives who are largely responsible for development of the air transport business. Moreover, it might weaken claims against the Government, since companies having such claims would presumably pass out of existence. Under any circumstances the carriers would lose the good will built up under their existing corporate names through a difficult period of pioneering.

Mr. Farley's bid for realignment of the air-mail companies, without adjudication of charges against them, has the appearance of a face-saving gesture. It is by no means certain, however, that the victimized companies will repudiate their executives, their good will, their claims against the Government and their self-respect to jump through the hoop thus held out to them. There is danger, of course, that operators guilty of fraudulent intentions may take this way out, while others void of offense continue to suffer the results of Mr. Farley's unproved accusations.

The need for judicial determination of the charges on which the cancellation order was based has thus become more rather than less acute. In effect the Postmaster General has made humiliation of operators who have never had a trial the alternative to another possible fiasco in transportation of the air mail.

La Corelli Lives.

Can it be that Dr. Bowerman was right when he said that Marie Corelli is remembered no more? Our popular librarian was talking about lady novelists and after mentioning them all, from Fanny Burney to Pearl Buck, he paused and sadly said that she, who once was the favorite of the good Queen Victoria, is dead beyond recall. 'It does not seem possible, and it isn't right. For there was a time when in any well-regulated household the works of La Corelli were as tenderly placed on the parlor what-not as was the family Bible. And they were probably consulted much more often, in the days of the crude pioneering culture we hear so much about, than the receptacle of family births and deaths.

Her red-backed books opened up magnificent vistas and made a whole democratic country long for what it missed in the way of royalty and society with the big "s." For she wrote of the high places of life, of dashing earls and beauteous ladies who set hearts afluttering from Cranberry Island, Me., to at least as far west as Hannibal, Mo. Her romantic world was a heaven on earth, peopled with puppets that strutted in the most magnificent clothes against the grandest background of all literature. La Corelli has had few equals in making what-is-not into what-should-be!

Has she been forgotten so soon? Perhaps in Washington, where a reputation is lucky if it outlasts an Administration. But not in Boston, where life rolls serenely on. There, the truth is, those green bags which were always alleged to hide six copies of Emerson's journals, in reality were used (and still are) to carry La Corelli from Marlborough to State street. Although for years the Browning Society's monthly meetings at the plush Hotel Vendome were supposed to rule the literary life of that ancient Athens of American culture, the fact is that the Marie Corelli Society, established this year, is taking its place.

For Marie Corelli is not believed dead in Boston! Its most eminent newspaper scooped the world with that news not long ago, printing on the front page the astounding revelation that the society, just formed, knows she is still alive, living incognito and in disguise! Wearied by adulation, she went into hiding, and now lives, old and tired, wandering the face of the earth. Boston expects her to return any day and it is said the Browning Society is in perpetual terror for fear that just as the tea is served she will walk into the Vendome parlor and make herself known. Dr. Bowerman had better retract his statement. For she might, if she sees his remarks, pick even the atrium of our central public library for the scene of her unveiling.

The only thing that surprises us about anything that happens now is that it didn't happen sooner.

A conscience is a dreadful bore; the more you listen to it, the more it talks.

Youthful Criminality.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read in your columns recently that Senator Copeland asked our local superintendent of schools to furnish him with data on "why children quit high school."

The seed of youthful criminality may be sown in the elementary schools by tactless teachers and principals, who give the progeny of the influential preference, regardless of their lack of ability.

Why does Senator Copeland not address himself to representative groups of youths, to those who have been bruised by discrimination and have lost faith in our morality; and try to tell them, not the press, that there is equal opportunity for all, and that justice prevails. Perhaps he will be frank enough to admit that the source of youthful criminality lies at the top, in the ruling powers of our alleged educational institutions, in the soiled hands of privilege seekers. He may then conclude that the school system also needs a new deal.

Explicitly, the privileged student receiving unearned honors from the school is just as much sinned against as the unfavored child of poor parentage. For, once accustomed by the schools to appropriate unearned distinctions, what scruples will he have in later life?

Our present educational system is, therefore, just as much, if not more, to blame than are economic conditions for youthful criminality.

Government by Aristocracy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The blue bloods and the rich have been in complete charge in this country for years. They have made the laws to benefit themselves and not the poor or average class. I would be glad to see how many rich and how many poor people were appointed by President Roosevelt to fill the major positions in the United States, both within the Nation and in the foreign service.

You can not make me believe that when a nation's head can entertain 1,000 people at a crack, night after night, can send as many as 25 other rich people abroad to a "peace conference," that we all know doesn't amount to a "hill of beans," and when the Nation has people in it that can afford to pay $1,000 for a baseball ticket, there is a need to soak "low" grade (not in morals or intellect) Government employes 15 per cent.

The only solution is to wrest the country from the hands of the aristocrats and try to put in "average type" people.

E. BRANDS.

Tourist Travel.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A million or more tourists and many permanent settlers have come to the South Atlantic this winter. In the main, it is due to a restoration of confidence, along with a vast increase of the migratory class.

The value of the tourist patronage this winter is estimated at $400,000,000 or more. Obviously, if the tourist business in the South were organized as it is on the Pacific, this travel would increase rapidly.

If our railways, highways, hotels and resorts can not unite in a South Atlantic Tourist Bureau and a regional plan, the Department of Commerce should be asked to take a guiding hand and prevent the duplication of resorts, coordinate advertising and stop ruinous competition in a business which may become the South's greatest asset.

LINDSAY RUSSELL.
Wilmington, N. C., March 23.

Concerning Rabies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your March 22 issue three "D. V. M.'s" and one Ph. D. assail Mrs. Sue M. Farrel's published statements concerning rabies and the Pasteur treatment for this much disputed malady. Dr. Giltner seeks to demolish Mrs. Farrel's statistics on hydrophobia with a counter report from the council of health of the League of Nations (a medical body), which admits 53 cases of paralysis and 11 deaths in 60,052 inoculations; but attempts to offset this showing with the hypothetical assumption that "without the Pasteur treatment there would have been a possible mortality from 600 to 9,000!"

I would amend Dr. Giltner's complacent bow to medical science in this case by saying I think the medical profession—in view of the prestige it enjoys—should be ashamed to resort to an unsupported, hypothetical assumption.

MRS. ANNIE RILEY HALE.
Washington, March 24.

Straining at Gnats.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: About the most ironical of all futile efforts to solve the local "traffic" problem would seem to be the present drive against double parking. All over the city are thousands of cars, parking hours and even days overtime, about which nothing at all is done. A little consideration will show that the 18-hour restriction is virtually unenforceable for the simple reason that police patrols are changed every eight hours, and so there is no way of telling how long a car has been in the same place.

But if one tries to draw up to one's own front door, or if a delivery requires a few minutes' wait and in desperation one double-parks, since there is nothing else that he can possibly do, he is ticketed. Was there ever a sillier case of straining at gnats and swallowing camels? Or of catching the victim instead of the villain?

THERESA RUSSELL.
Washington, March 27.

The Racial Problem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The racial problem—forever unsolved—is again forcing its way into prominence. Racial feeling is older than the pyramids and will endure until human nature undergoes a fundamental change. This instinct is entirely natural. There is no truer adage than, "Birds of a feather, flock together."

Back on the farm we behold the animals and fowls functioning in separate groups. It may be argued than man should evolve beyond the barn-yard state, but, in truth, these denizens of the farmland live in comparative contentment, which is more than can be said for belligerent human beings.

E. K. G.
Washington, March 27.

In the Right Direction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Stopping the sale of tickets and soliciting by policemen and firemen may be a severe blow to their benevolent activities, but it is a move in the right direction. This law will protect the honest and conscientious men of both services, who know very well that just as soon as they ask and accept favors from the public, they put themselves under obligation, and many of them become dilatory in enforcing the law.

It is a most fertile field for graft and corruption. The compensation of our public servants should be high enough so they need not look to the general public for favors.

RICHARD J. PAHNKE.
Washington, March 26.

Less Milk, More Prosperity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial on milk production and consumption was well considered and timely. It does seem inconsistent to curtail production and advance prices when so great a portion of the consuming public has insufficient funds to meet its present needs.

Perhaps Dr. W. A. Wirt is correct when he says that it will make no difference what kind of a Congress is elected this year.

A SPECTATOR.
Washington, March 26.

Headlines.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You "Headline" program on the radio on March 26 was a very interesting and instructive one. If you keep up this standard I think you will have many listeners.

NATHAN B. WILLIAMS.
Washington, March 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your "Headlines of 20 Years Ago," as given over the radio, was fine. Keep it up!

F. E. SIZER.

"Fault-Finding."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In looking for trouble one never has to go far to meet it, and one may air a grievance anywhere. The habit of finding fault is entirely too common, and it is insidious. It grows by what it feeds on, and one grouch leads to another.

Let some of the energy devoted to fault-finding be converted into promoting useful enterprises and getting something done that the world wants done. Those who aspire with a smile are those who arrive.

OSMUNDO REYNANTE.
Washington, March 5.

Bonus Complications.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is one point the veterans have overlooked so far. When the bonus legislation was passed the dollar was a 100 per cent gold dollar. But if the Government should settle with them now the payments would be made with dollars that are only 59 per cent gilt-edged.

Consequently, Uncle Sam, owing them $2,400,000,000 in gold currency, will have to add about another billion in order to allow for the depreciation $2,400,000,000—that is what they are entitled to, not one cent less.

Piety Street Stays.

New Orleans has suffered gravely through street name changes, many of those now replaced having helped to form much of the unique atmosphere of ancient days. Some of our changes are quite inexplicable—as, for instance, why should Good Children street and Greatmen street have departed, whereas Madman street is with us still? And also, why should we have retained Piety and Industry and Humanity and Independence and have abandoned both Virtue and Genius? And, in dropping such sinful titles as Craps and Bagatelle, why have we, through good days and bad, remained faithful to Desire? And why, by the same token, should we have eliminted Love street?

It would be tempting to go further in such reflections, but just now our attention is drawn by a report on some of the ancient street names of Paris, which the City of Light has had the judgment to preserve, says the New Orleans Times-Picayune. There are, for example, in the French capital's list of thoroughfares (translated) "The Street of the Fishing Cat," "The Street of the Mule's Footsteps," as well as such others as "North Pole street," "The Basket of Flowers," "The Little Street of Lilacs," "The Valley of Pardon," "A Drop of Gold," "Doll street" and "The White Peacock."

But over there, in contrast with our own Good Children street, Paris has "The Place of the Two Bad Boys" and another called "The Rosy Baby." And, as if to go our Madmen street one better, Paris has "The Street of the Headless Woman," in French, "La Rue de la Femme sans Tête." Would that last name have survived in our own street and avenue guide? We wonder!

The Post Impressionist

The Other Emma

Postoffice, Friday.

Not long since, this Column whispered a diffident word about that college president and diplomat, Mary Emma Woolley. But there is now another Emma dimly in the American public eye—one who once blackened it:

Emma Goldman.

The Post Impressionist was not officially extant when this Emma visited Washington a while ago—but may we talk about her?

* * * *

Once upon a time the consequences of talking about her were disturbing. You had to take a big breath before admitting that you knew her. When you owned an abstract admiration for her courage, you were regarded as another anarchist.

* * * *

For E. G. was an anarchist when unconsciously anarchistic America dreaded anarchism more than, in this year of grace, it dreads state socialism. She was the Molly Pitcher of her creed. She was in evidence, and more than audible, wherever there appeared a really first-class strike or a really rosy riot. As often as not, she would be there beforehand. She didn't have to investigate, didn't have to study dry pay schedules, dull balance sheets. "Hers not to reason why." Her simple, direct-action slogan ran:

"The workers are always right!"

She was labeled "The Queen of the Anarchists" by young writers more than slightly ignorant of philosophic anarchism's principles. She was depicted with a bomb in one hand, a pistol in the other, between her fine teeth a bloody knife. And then, in the Last Roundup of the World War we deported her.

* * * *

Now, allowed to "visit relatives," she returns, after 14 years.

To what?

To be regarded with merely mild curiosity. To find that, in the Capitol, she would be mistaken as a colleague of Ex-Senator Brookhart, whereas our new friend, Soviet Russia, exiled her.

She was plump. Her myopic eyes behind thick-lensed spectacles were merrily blue, her soft hair golden, skin pink. At 64 she is still comfortably billowy, but the eyes are sad, the brittle hair graying, skin as pale as a prisoner's.

It is odd, that change in America's attitude toward E. G. How much of it is due to radical growths in our once cloistered garden of conservatism? How much to a certain softening within the always ample bosom of E. G. herself?

* * * *

As a matter of fact, even in those old days, the bond between her and some of her best friends was less revolutionary than culinary. Cookery is an art more appreciated in Utopia's kitchens than capitalistic banquet halls imagine. And E. G., undesirable citizen, alleged fomenter of rebellion, mixed and cooked better batter-cakes than are to be found anywhere outside Pennsylvania-Germandom.

* * * *

One of her youngest opponents, whom we don't recognize when we cast one of our rare glances in the mirror now, would ride home with her in New York's nocturnal subway after her reddest lectures. She had just stirred a crowd to what, in their offices, reporters were describing as a "frenzy." She must talk loudly here, to overcome the noise of the train. So when the train stopped, her voice rang from end to end of the astonished car:

". . . and therefore we've got to have Revolution!"

* * * *

Then we would go to her tiny flat on the Lower East Side—meagerly furnished, uneasy chairs, a few books, battered by much reading; not one picture on the walls. And we would go into the tiny kitchen—where was, in contrast, everything that a good kitchen ought to have.

". . . revolution!" she would shout.

". . . law and order," her guest would falter.

She was rolling up the sleeves from her round, white arms while she argued for atheism; the young fellow she had invited here was preaching Christian apologetics while he watched her. She was mixing the—what is it—dough?—pouring it into its destined receptacle, while she defended the ethics of political assassination, while she belittled its practical effectiveness, and while her hungry friend vainly tried to interrupt with the logic of all his reactionary training.

He found it annoying to listen, but wonderful to watch. E. G. talked ruin all the while she ate, but what she gave her guest to eat proved always most constructive.

* * * *

E. G. is lecturing on only literary and similar subjects during her present tour. That's a pity, for, at least of old, when she lectured on literature she was frequently dull and right, whereas when she talked on philosophy and political economy she was never right and never dull. However, in these days so many Americans have fallen asleep over Will Durant's easy lessons in philosophy that we have too many Ph. D.'s—and, as for political economy, on this subject every suffering citizen desires to do the talking himself.

If Miss Goldman's manager wants to make a success of his star, we advise him to have a stove put on the platform, have her lecture about batter-cakes—and have her then and there demonstrate her precepts.

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

NOW if it comes about that the charges of Dr. Wirt, the school superintendent of the United States Steel dominated city of Gary, Ind., are to put Prof. Moley in a reminiscent mood, I do not see why I should not get to reminiscing, too. Yes, indeed, I recall Mr. Christians, the Crusaders-for-Economic-Liberty man, whom the professor remembers as having talked with Mr. Roosevelt down at Warm Springs about his being just the Kerensky of the revolution. It is funny, isn't it, how such a story as Dr. Wirt's brings up those forgotten faces.

BARGERON.

The Crusaders' man, Mr. Christian, says he told Mr. Roosevelt he would not be able to ride through to the third stage of the revolution, the dictatorship stage, that if he did he would be the first man in history to do so.

"Oliver Cromwell did," Mr. Roosevelt is said to have replied, thereby showing he was very good at repartee.

We fellows who accompanied Mr. Roosevelt on this trip didn't know that the conversation between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Christians had been this interesting. We knew it had been interesting, though. Mr. Roosevelt himself told us that.

My recollection of Mr. Christians' visit was that I was impressed at the time with the "interesting" people that one accompanying Mr. Roosevelt met. I think I commented, in fact, on the "interesting" parade we fellows were observing. There was Eddie Dowling, the comedian—I shall never forget him; Benny Smith, Wall Street operator whom only a short time before a Senate committee had been after, and oh, a host of others—interesting all!

We first heard of Mr. Christians, by way of reports over a period of several days, that he was trying to organize the textile workers in Columbus, Ga., 40 miles away and that he planned to lead a march of several thousand unemployed on Warm Springs. It is not my recollection that the small Secret Service detail showed any apprehension. And we fellows paid no attention to the reports until one day Mr. Christians bobbed up—not with an army, though. He had two or three fellows with him, that's all.

If it will aid any in the solution of the great mystery, I can vouch for the length of his visit with Mr. Roosevelt. We fellows had gone up to the little white cottage atop a hill for our daily press conference, and had to wait outside until Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Christians got through. We thought this would never be. We got impatient, too, because we were so anxious to get back to our cottage, where it was our wont to sit before a log fire, spin yarns about the interesting people we meet and toss corn liquor into the fire to watch the lurid flames, then philosophize on what it must do to one's stomach.

When Mr. Christians finally emerged he reported that he had found Mr. Roosevelt quite sympathetic to his proposal—something about paying a man for his energy output, on the basis of energy units or something like that. Because of this he said he had called off his strike and march of unemployed. Whether he ever had either organized I don't know. Anyhow, we all laughed and went on in to see Mr. Roosevelt.

Simply as a matter of pleasantry I told Mr. Roosevelt that we had met Mr. Christians outside and that he had reported Mr. Roosevelt quite sympathetic to his proposal. We fellows laughed and expected the then President-elect to do the same.

Instead, and to my great surprise at least, he replied with a perfectly straight face that he had, indeed, been most interested in Mr. Christians' proposal, that their conference had been a very delightful one. In fact, if my memory serves me right, he said he told Mr. Christians that there was a bill pending in Congress to do just what Mr. Christians wanted, and that he, Mr. Roosevelt, would write the chairman of the committee a letter asking him to look into the matter.

It was then that I realized the full force of the personality that a year later was to settle the threatened automobile strike and have the country eating out of his hands.

Cooper Cited For Third Time

The District grand jury yesterday returned its third indictment against Col. Wade H. Cooper, president of the closed Commercial National Bank.

The latest indictment charges the banker misapplied approximately $400,000 of the bank's funds. There was no mention in the presentment of Bates Warren, general counsel for the bank, who had previously been indicted with Cooper.

The first indictment against Col. Cooper was "nolle-prossed" by the Government, and the second was dismissed by Justice Peyton Gordon, who held that it was defective in that it failed to charge either Warren or Cooper with "knowledge" of the alleged irregularities attributed to them.

Tissue Discovery Expected to Aid Fight on Cancer

Toronto, March 29 (AP).—A discovery which may prove a forward step in the fight against cancer has been made by Dr. F. G. Banting, codiscoverer of insulin, Dr. Ward J. MacNeal, of New York, told the American Association for Cancer Research at its convention here today.

Cancer research workers, he said, have believed that tissue grafts of a type of cancer known as "Rous Sarcoma," when transplanted into healthy chickens, continue to grow and spread.

Dr. Banting found, Dr. MacNeal said, that the transplanted growth disintegrates, and another tumor grows around the transplanted part in the tissue of the living bird.

It has not yet been determined, however, the convention was informed, whether this fact ultimately will have practical application in the problem of human cancer.

Race mixture is causing a large number of maternal deaths in Canada and the United States, Dr. James C. Goodwin, of Toronto, informed the alumni of General Hospital at their meeting today.

Senate Passes 7 Bills to Aid Fight on Crime

One Provides Government Means to Prosecute Racketeering.

(Associated Press.)

The Senate struck yesterday at gangsters and racketeers, passing a group of bills to strengthen the Federal Government's hand in fighting crime.

Seven bills, tightening Federal laws, were passed by unanimous agreement and sent to the House. All were recommended by Attorney General Cummings.

Probably one of the most important of the bills would give the Government a new law under which it could prosecute commercial racketeering, with power to penalize offenders with jail sentences up to 99 years.

Other bills approved would extend Federal power over extortion by telephone, telegraph or other interstate commerce communication; make it unlawful for a person to flee from one State to another to avoid prosecution or testifying; strengthen the Lindburgh kidnaping law; penalize aid to escaping prisoners; make the murder of a Federal officer a Federal offense, and give the Government power to prosecute robberies of National or Federal Reserve banks.

Boese Death Held Suicide

Policeman Shot Himself, Coroner Certifies; in Ill Health.

A certificate of suicide was issued late yesterday by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald in the shooting of Policeman Hendrick Boese, 41, of the 600 block Twelfth street northwest, who ended his life earlier in the day by firing a shot through his head.

Boese, attached to the First Precinct, had been in ill health, his wife told officials. Early in the morning he asserted he was going to shoot himself, she stated.

Boese had been off duty four days, due to illness. Only an hour after his talk of suicide, he walked to the bathroom, faced the mirror, and fired. He was dead when policemen and an Emergency Hospital physician arrived.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Registration Is Urged As Police, Tax Measure

Berkeley, Calif., March 29 (AP).—Compulsory National registration of all residents, not only as a police measure, but to enforce collection of taxes, was recommended today to the western conference on Government by Maj. George D. Begole of Denver, former city auditor there.

Henry Toll, an Illinois State Senator and executive director of the American Legislators' Association, told the conference that State governments were for the most part directed by amateur legislators.

Message to Banghart Studied as Plot Clew

Joliet, Ill., March 29 (AP).—A jumbled message addressed to Basil Banghart, Touhy gangster in prison for the John Factor kidnaping, was studied by prison officials today on the possibility that it referred to an escape plot in code.

The note was turned over to Capt. John A. Carpenter by one of the prisoners who claimed he had intercepted it on its way down the prison "grapevine" to Banghart. Carpenter was able to make out two phrases—"have plenty on" and "developments fine."

Three Bank Bandits Are Routed by Woman

Mount Gilead, Ohio, March 29 (AP). Three machine-gun bandits who hatd disguised themselves by daubing their faces with lipstick and rouge, obtained only $45 in a holdup of the Peoples' Savings Bank here today.

Mrs. J. W. Cook, 50, bank bookkeeper, routed the bandit's by stepping on a burglar alarm as she was ordered into a back room, where she created more commotion by rattling windows.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Inquiry Into the Big Overthrow.

(Being a cross-examination of Elmer Twichell, who indorsed Dr. Wirt's charges.)

Q. Elmer, you submitted a document to the Committee of the Nation in which it is charged there is a carefully formulated plot to bring about a revolution in the United States?

A. I did.

Q. Did you submit it to Hollywood first?

A. I did, and the movie magnates rejected it.

Q. Why?

A. They said they thought it very funny, but that they couldn't get Chaplin to do it.

* * * *

Q. You say your information is that Mr. Roosevelt is being used as merely the Kerensky of the revolution and that he is to be replaced ultimately by a Stalin?

A. That's all in the scenario.

Q. Where did you get this data?

A. You mean this thissa and data?

Q. Yes.

A. I got it from members of the "brain trust."

Q. Collect or prepaid?

A. I don't remember.

Q. What do you mean by "brain trust?"

A. It is a body of college boys who were a little too small for the football team, but big enough for commissars.

Q. Where can these "brain trusters" be found?

A. Where can't they?

* * * *

Q. Do you believe that President Roosevelt is a Kerensky?

A. All I know is that he is always rushin'.

* * * *

Q. Has this American Stalin been chosen already?

A. He is walking around now waiting to be tapped for Topsy Turvy.

Q. Why walking?

A. He is taking no chances. If he sits down it may be harder to see him at the croocial moment.

* * * *

Q. Have you heard his name mentioned?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it Huey Long?

A. No; this is to be a revolution, not a boxing contest.

Q. Is it Al Smith?

A. He threw up that magazine job for other reasons.

Q. Is it Primo Carnera?

A. No. The revolutionists are clever enough to know they can't build a new White House to fit a dictator's feet.

* * * *

Q. Could you give us some clew to the identity of this figure who is to rule the new America?

A. All I can say is that he is a figure that has captured the fancy of millions of Americans, stirred their imagination to unprecedented heights and time and again aroused the Nation to frenzied manifestations of approval.

Q. You mean Mickey Mouse?

A. No, but you're getting warm.

* * * *

Q. What are the general characteristics of this new ruler?

A. An unusual personality, a commanding physical presence, a remarkable flair for clothes, a most unusual gift for speech and the ability to move the masses.

Q. Mae West?

A. Now you've got me, Senator; now you've got me!

The Circus, or the True Harbinger.

Spring is here! Spring is here!
My eager heart just bellows.
I haven't seen the robin, no,
But I've seen Dexter Fellowes.

Fifteen hundred teachers in the New York City public schools are crazy, says Dr. Emil Altman, chief medical examiner. "See!" cries the New York schoolboy. "Didn't I tell you all the time?"

If public schools are really full of goofy teachers it may explain why little Oscar Twitchell, Elmer's little backward boy, says nine times six equals Constantinople and that the capital of Pennsylvania is a right-angle triangle in four syllables minus 2 per cent.

Mrs. Cudahy Insists She Loves Husband

Milwaukee, March 29 (AP).—Under a fire of cross-examination Mrs. Michael F. Cudahy today clung to her assertion she loves the wealthy packer who is suing her for divorce.

In February, 1933, Mrs. Cudahy donned a servant's coat, disguised herself with dark glasses and accompanied a detective to the home of Mrs. K. C. Fernending, Cudahy's sister, she admitted. Her object was to determine whom Cudahy was taking to dinner there.

Warning!

Poisonous Easter Egg Dyes Banned Here.

A brand of Easter egg dyes, found to be poisonous, was banned from the Washington market yesterday by Health Officer William C. Fowler.

Analyses of the dyes, he said, showed the presence of lead chromate, which is poisonous even if touched.

Directions on the dyes, which are sold in containers on a small card, are to drop a small portion of the dyes into water and to blow gently on the mixture to get a mottled effect, before dipping the egg into the solution.

Dr. Fowler pointed out there are many harmless dyes on the market and warned against dyes which were found to be poisonous.

McKinley made him Collector of Internal Revenue in 1902, and Roosevelt and Taft reappointed him. Elected Governor in 1912-1915. Decided to discard politics to replenish his fortunes. Softly impeached by opposition press as "The Maryland Gentleman," he accepted the label. Pleasant, distinguished-looking. Rarely utters a sound in the Senate. Regular Republican.

There Are Dirt Eaters, But No Restaurant Caters to Them

By Robert Quillen

Law and public opinion and common sense agree that the public should be protected from smut.

Even the most liberal-minded bachelor critic will not contend that a pervert is exercising his rightful liberty of expression when he writes filth on a schoolhouse wall.

Why, then, does the law tolerate indecent literature?

Those who ask for protection usually speak in the name of the young. They say that boys and girls whose minds are innocent and clean are corrupted and debased by reading dirt.

But that isn't the only argument against it. Filth may not injure adult minds; for those who have high standards of decency will not read it, and those who delight in it are already corrupt.

But why should the law tolerate literature that appeals only to perverted minds? It doesn't tolerate any other method of catering to perverts.

The stock arguments that parents should choose all reading matter for their children; that no one is forced to buy the smut offered for sale; that the press must be free to print what the public demands—all of these would be sound if dirt was essential to literature.

But it isn't. If no unclean word had ever been written, the world would be no poorer. Literature without filth would be as complete as art without pornographic pictures and the drama without incest.

Dirty literature doesn't supply a damand for literature. It supplies a demand for dirt.

You are told that the adult and liberal mind enjoys certain unclean works because of their humor, wit, satire or philosophy. But expurgate them—take out the barnyard words—and little interest would remain.

Rabelais without naughty-boy words would be the most tiresome drivel.

The only possible excuse for suggestive and pornographic publications is the fact that people of perverted taste will buy them—and to accept that is to justify any abomination or corruption in existence.

Bowles Held In Bail Here As Tax-Dodger

Disbarred Attorney to Get Hearing April 12 on Indictment.

Charged with violations of income tax laws, Norman S. Bowles, disbarred attorney, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday. He was released on $2,000 bond for a hearing April 12.

Commissioner Turnage said Bowles was arrested on a warrant issued here at the request of Federal authorities in Baltimore, where an indictment has been returned against him.

It was understood the indictment was based on testimony adduced during the trial of T. Morris Wampler, local attorney, who was convicted in Baltimore of failing properly to indicate his tax returns.

The warrant charges Bowles with failing to file a proper return and with evading income taxes in 1931, and with additional evasions in 1932. He was arrested by Assistant Chief Deputy United States Marshal John J. Clarkson.

Lindbergh Remembers Biffle, His Old Mentor

Chicago, March 29 (AP).—Virtually penniless and gravely ill, Ira O. Biffle learned tonight that he still had friends—among them his former aviation pupil, Charles A. Lindbergh.

The first contribution to a fund which pilots were raising for Biffle, whose plight became known just yesterday, came from Lindbergh. The world-famous flier sent his donation in a note to the hospital authorities.

Cannon Loses Freedom Plea; Early Trial Due

Wilson Plans to Docket Bishop's Case for April 8 or 9.

Justice Peyton Gordon, in the District Supreme Court, yesterday overruled without comment demurrers of Bishop James Cannon, jr., and Miss Ada L. Burroughs, attacking an indictment which charges them with violating provisions of the corrupt practices act.

The way was thus paved for an early trial, probably immediately upon the return of the Supreme Court from the Easter recess. Assistant United States Attorney John J. Wilson indicated that he would seek to have the trial set for either April 8 or 9.

Bishop Cannon and Miss Burroughs are alleged to have failed to properly report to the secretary of the House of Representatives contributions received from E. C. Jameson, New York capitalist, in their Virginia campaign against Alfred E. Smith.

There were originally ten counts in the indictment. Eight were thrown out by the United States Supreme Court, and defense attorneys battled to have the remaining two declared invalid on the ground that invalidating of the eight necessarily carried inferences that should render them illegal.

Justice Gordon, however, refused to agree with that view.

"Muleykeh."

Browning wrote a poem about a man who owned a mare named Muleykeh; she was the fastest mare in the country, and it was well known that no other horse could beat her in competition. She was naturally her owner's pride and delight; and though he was very fond of her sister mare, which was almost as fast, Muleykeh held the first place in his heart. A man came along who tried to buy her; in vain. Then one night he stole her. The owner leaped on the back of the other mare and gave chase. Now, Muleykeh knew there was a strange man riding her, and she could not do her best; the result was that the inferior horse was rapidly overtaking her, and the owner was certain of recovering his property.

At that exciting moment, what impulse was it that made him shout to the thief: "You fool! You don't know how to ride Muleykeh! Do this and that!" The thief instantly obeyed and Muleykeh disappeared never to be seen again.

In the morning the man's friends visited his tent and found him in tears. He explained that Muleykeh, the pride of his heart, had been stolen. Then they sympathized with him, and said that of course the thief would have been successful, because no other horse could have overtaken her. The owner explained that it was quite otherwise; he was overtaking her, because the thief did not know how to get the best speed, and would have lost if he, the owner, had not shown him how to escape.

Here his friends lost all sympathy with him and called him a fool. But the owner said the only way he could recapture her was by her defeat. She would have been beaten. And then he uttered the phrase that contains the meaning of the whole story: "You never have loved my Pearl."

You don't know what love is.

What is love? Is it merely the desire for possession? Or is it the wish that the beloved one should never be dishonored? In other words, is true love shown by one's interest in one's own gratification, or by the wish for the success and happiness of the beloved object, no matter at what price to oneself? What is love?

Jenckes Leave Plan Opposed By Commission

Fireman Fines Also Are Disapproved by D. C. Board.

Legislation proposed by Representative Virginia Jenckes (Democrat), Indiana, which would grant 30 days annual leave to firemen and fix the sum of $50 as the maximum fine to be imposed for infractions of the firemen's manual, was opposed yesterday by the District Commissioners.

In a report to the House District Committee, the Commissioners declared that Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom is of the opinion that the amount of fines should be left to the discretion of the Fire Department Trial Board, subject to review by the Commissioners. This view is shared by the Commissioners.

Admitting that the proposal to increase the period of annual leave from 15 to 30 days has merit, the Commissioners opposed it because of additional expenses.

If the legislation were enacted, the Commissioners said, it would require 40 additional firemen at an annual cost of $75,000, and the purchase of uniforms and equipment at a cost of $3,000.

Internal Revenue Wing Low Bid Is $149,200

Measles Cases Here Make Sharp Increase

Treasury Fold Must Wait on Bell to Leave.

Treasury Department employes yesterday were declared to be "offside" on two important rushes, the lunch hour and the 4:30 leave taking.

Referee W. H. McReynolds, administrative assistant to Secretary Morgenthau, called the play and the penalty.

In a special circular to all employes, McReynolds noted that some workers in hats and coats were gathering in the Treasury entrances several minutes before the 12:30 bell for lunch and the 4:30 closing signal.

This practice was bad, McReynolds said, and added that all workers should remain at their desks until the bell actually sounded.

Evidently, this crowding of corridors has made the Treasury Building difficult of exit and entrance for officials.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

SUNDRY Open Letters to the Publishers on the Subject of Book Covers in Which Is an Occasional Exasperation and a Not Infrequent Praise.

Dear Bobbs-Merrill:

I said the other day how much I liked your book, "Trains." But I hadn't the space to make clear how chagrined I was by the way you bound the volume. That red cloth cover with orange printing looked like a raw beefsteak decorated with pimiento cheese. There was no help from the design. So I'm going to leave the jacket on—the fine photograph of the train puffing up the mountain will hide your sinning.

THEO. HALL.

* * * *

Dear Harper & Brothers and dear Houghton Mifflin:

You are both soundly good in cover design and typography, but there are times when I wish you'd let your hair down.

Dear Alfred A. Knopf:

When your covers are good, they're very, very good——but when they're bad they add new meaning to that word. "Collected Prose of Elinor Wylie" was a gorgeous piece of work.

But when you dished up Romain's "Passion's Pilgrims" in magenta cloth, with black and gold printing and a cobalt blue top, you made me ill for a week. As to the decoration, there on the cover and all through the book, did it mean anything? I thought the days of typographic gimcrackerie in the style of an ornamented iron stove had ended about 1880.

Your colophons, in which at the end of a book you summarize the history of the type face, are an excellent notion. Yet to a constant reader they grow repetitious. I'll bet a second-hand book-jacket that you haven't rewritten one in six years. Why don't you explain in the colophon some of the particular typographic problems of the book in hand? You could do that easily. I even think you would want to do that. Because, in company with few other publishers, you really care that readers should know about such things.

* * * *

Dear Smith & Haas:

The cover you gave Budgen's "James Joyce" was top-notch. The one you gave Nerney's "Thomas A. Edison" I'll have to call dowdy and let it go at that. If you could do the first kind all the time, I'd be ready to back you against the field.

* * * *

Dear Simon & Schuster:

You won't relish being pointed at as a moral. But it's a good one. For a firm which specializes in best-sellers, thereby implying that you keep your ears close to the ground, you do a marked service for American book printing in showing that books can be made with excellent craftsmanship and still sell by the thousands. "Weymouth Sands" in especial was a joy to the eye. And to the hand also, because a good job can be told by the feel.

* * * *

Dear E. P. Dutton:

I wish I could believe you cared what the cover of a book looked like.

* * * *

Dear Doubleday Doran:

I know it's hard, with so long a list, to keep up a typographic distinction. Your books make few pretensions, and seldom fall below par.

But you did muff the cover of your four-volume encyclopedia, "Facts." Surely you didn't want it to look like any set of books which was peddled from door to door in 1910. But I'm afraid it does.

* * * *

Dear Random House:

You're lucky—you have a short and highly selective list. The result is a certain uniformity of appearance, but the high level you maintain is matched by no other American publisher.

* * * *

Dear Yale University Press:

Your text typography is notably good. But the covers you give your books, so far as I've seen them, fall pretty short of the mark. "Suffering" had far too much gilt on the back. "Sense and Poetry" was bound in very pleasing cloth, but the black stamping was shoddy looking and dull.

* * * *

Dear Harvard University Press:

Your taste is unimpeachable. But all your books look alike as peas in a pod.

* * * *

Dear Viking Press:

Sometimes your cover designs seem just a shade gaudy—"They All Sang" for example. Yet your ideas are always fresh and you always convert me to admiration.

* * * *

Dear Macmillan:

You're not often inspired, but I never saw you botch a job. Since you have, I believe, the largest list of all, that's a considerable achievement.

* * * *

Dear Harcourt Brace:

As far as I'm concerned, you get the All-America Prize for book typography. Your list is a long one, of the utmost variety. Yet you never fall into monotony, or dullness, or extravagance. When you can take material with so little decorative connotation as has Mills' "Signals and Speech in Electrical Communication," and make a pure gem of it, then you ring the bell. Please thank Robert Josephy for us.

Welles Lauds New Deal Aid Toward Cuba

Intervention Attitude of "Money-Changers" Hit by State Official.

Declaring our own money changers should no more determine the destinies of the Cuban people than they should the destinies of the American, Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Welles expounded American policy, past and present, toward Cuba last night to members of the District division of the Young Democratic Clubs. The speech was broadcast.

"We hope the present Cuban government will carry out successfully the liberal and enlightened program which it has announced," Welles said. "We intend to cooperate to the mutual advantage of our two peoples. * * * We have every reason to hope we will see in the not far distant future a prosperous Cuba, governed by Cubans, without intervention or interference from the United States."

President Roosevelt has made it clear the keystone of American foreign policy must be the cultivation of mutually helpful political and commercial relations in the Western Hemisphere, Welles went on, and recalled the "good neighbor" policy first enunciated in the President's inaugural address.

Reviews Past Experiences.

Then he reviewed briefly Cuban history, pointing out the role intervention and the threat of intervention often played in determining Cuban events. Cubans became accustomed to look to Washington for correction of local situations, instead of learning to rely upon themselves, Welles pointed out.

The right to intervene under the Platt amendment made American interests operating in Cuba look to Washington for adjustment of disputes with local officials; the Cuban government became only a facade, Welles continued.

"The iniquity lay in the fact regulation and control of capital was determined not by the Cubans but by a powerful group of financial interests frequently potent in the councils of the Government which possessed the right to intervene in Cuba's domestic affairs," Welles declared.

Recalling the events which led to the downfall of President Machado last August and the chaotic half year which ensued, Welles told of his efforts to help resolve the difficulties.

Cuba's New Deal Wins.

When finally in January Carlos Mendieta was selected by all parties to head the state, this Government promptly recognized him, Welles went on. The yardstick in extending and withholding recognition had been the degree of popular support the various regimes enjoyed.

Since January efforts here have been concentrated on inaugurating Cuba's New Deal, he showed. Four simultaneous steps are under way:

The measure before Congress to reduce domestic sugar acreage coupled with a new and larger quota for Cuban sugar;

Negotiations for a new reciprocal commercial treaty with Cuba, which are going forward;

The establishment of the so-called second Import-Export Bank to promote a revived trade, and

The announced intention to undertake modifications of the Platt amendment to eliminate the right to intervene.

On the basis of these four approaches, Welles hoped Cuba will soon enter upon a new era.

Stafford Courthouse, Va., March 29 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Mrs. Virgie Lee Golden, widow of Bertie C. Golden, who died Tuesday at the home of her sister, Mrs. Jack English, of Stafford County, were conducted at her home in Richmond yesterday. She was buried in Forest Lawn Cemetery there.

'Salty' Landlubbers Throng Brooklyn As Fleet Heralds

New York, March 29 (AP).—The itinerant band of colorful characters who follow the United States fleet from coast to coast is gathering in New York again for the review of the naval vessels the last of May.

"Sea-going Tony," the tailor, who hasn't put foot on a ship since he was seasick for 11 days in 1891, is back in Sands street from San Pedro. Angelo, the tattoo "artist," and "Ikie the Pawnbroker" are other recent arrivals. The restaurant woman nicknamed "Tugboat Annie" is expected any day.

Dozens of additional members of this transient army are on the way—tailors, barbers, fortune tellers, tattoo "artists" and photographers.

Senate Approves Hess Retirement Measure

George W. Hess is retired and made director emeritus of the Botanic Gardens, under a resolution adopted by the Senate yesterday. A retirement pay of $3,000 a year is provided.

Department of Agriculture officials are seeking to have the gardens transferred to their jurisdiction.

Similar Atoms Cause Cancer And Aid Health

Experts Seek Method by Which Elements End as Bitter Foes.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 29 (AP).—Chemical substances as much alike as Tweedledum and Tweedledee, composed of the identical number and same kind of atoms but differing slightly in their groupings are being found by chemistry to play an important role in widely different manifestations of life.

A group of seven different chemicals, including some without which life would be impossible, have been found, by recent research in Europe and at Columbia University, to contain the same basic nucleus, or building blocks found also in substances producing deadly cancer.

These building blocks are known to chemists as the phenanthrine group. They contain 14 atoms of carbon and 10 atoms of hydrogen in each molecule.

This very same phenanthrine nucleus, the chemists attending the meeting of the American Chemical Society here were told, is found in such widely different substances as the sex hormones, which form the basis of the theory of rejuvenation by gland transplantation; vitamin D, the rickets-preventing vitamin; the bile acids in the human body; the resin acids in evergreen trees; the powerful substances of the digitalis class, so useful in stimulating heart action; the morphine group of alkaloids, and the coal tar substances which produce cancer.

The work was described by Prof. Marston T. Bogert, internationally known organic chemist of Columbia University.

Chemistry is now at work, Prof. Bogert said, to produce these substances synthetically in the laboratory and to find out means to make them interchangeable one into another.

Turks Bar Insull From Black Sea

Sea, all day, under a heavy police guard.

If the Bosporus is closed to him, as well as the Suez Canal, as Stavro Tchelepides, the Greek ship's agent said, his only recourse would be to return to the Mediterranean, whose only other water exit is by way of Gibraltar.

Insull Is Well.

The aged Insull was well when the Maiotis arrived here at 6:30 a. m., with the intention of pausing only long enough to take on provisions, a matter of five hours.

He complained, however, of the great emotional strain involved in his flight from Greece, his days of wandering over the Mediterranean, and the uncertainty of his fate.

It was said that if Turkish officials finally allowed Insull to traverse the narrow and winding Bosporus, Rumania and Bulgaria would be closed to him, those governments have indicated. This gave rise to rumors that he might try to reach friends in Persia of Mme. Lilie Couyoumoglou, the wife of a Bagdad merchant who has long been a friend of the Insulls.

Martin Insull Wins Delay in Hearing

Chicago, March 29 (AP).—A tall man, slightly stooped, fallen from millions to poverty, he said, stood before the bar in Criminal Court in Cook County and answered to the name of Martin J. Insull. Later he was released on bond to go anywhere in the United States until called for trial.

Branded an undesirable alien, pallid beneath the stigma of an accused embezzler, white head of a great utility company the lesser of the world's two famous truants from justice was "home" to face a jury alone after extradition from Canada.

The judge asked him if he would plea guilty or not guilty to indictments alleging that he embezzled $344,000 and $20,000 from the treasury of Middle West Utilities Co. and Mississippi Valley Utilities Investment Co. The defendant pressed his lips together, but did not speak.

His attorney, John E. Northrup, preferred that formal arraignment and pleas be deferred until he could study the case.

Judge James F. Fardy, to whom the trial was assigned by Chief Justice Philip J. Finnegan, agreed to hear preliminary motions April 6.

Three Men Indicted In Attack on Marshal

On the complaint of Herbert C. Akers, colored deputy United States marshal, the District grand jury yesterday indicted Albert H. Smith, Victor Juliano and John Schley on charges of assault with a dangerous weapon, and assaulting a deputy marshal.

Ackers allegedly was beaten and kicked January 12 when he attempted to seize an automobile in the possession of Juliano's father. He was armed with a court order to take the car.

Capitol Architect Urged As Caretaker of Court

The Architect of the Capitol would be placed in charge of the "structural and mechanical care" of the new Supreme Court Building, under a resolution introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas.

New Road to Riches and Fame: Be First to Catch Giant Panda

Rare Beast of Western China Would Draw Zoologists From Everywhere to Bid; Only Two White Men Have Ever Seen One.

By Robert F. Whitney.

Want to make a small fortune—perhaps as much as $25,000?

Capture a giant panda and put it on the auction block and the heads of all the zoos in the world will beat a path to your door to bid on it.

Sounds easy, doesn't it? But you had better hurry before Frank Buck beats you to it, because it is the first live panda that will be a real treasure.

No zoo in the world has ever had a panda and, according to Dr. William M. Mann, head of the Washington Zoo, only two white men, Col. Theodore and Kermit Roosevelt, have seen the mysterious beast alive.

Specimens are rare even in museums. The National Museum has four skins, sent by missionaries, and about a year ago it acquired two skeletons, Remington Kellogg, associate curator of mammals, says.

To find the panda you must go to western China, in the Province of Szechuan. The mountain area of this isolated region is the only place in the world where the panda lives.

Zoologists say that the panda is a relative of both the bear and the raccoon, although it can not be classed as either.

When you catch your panda, if you do, you will have one of the most striking and beautiful animals in existence, and one which is more of mystery than any "sea serpent."

The giant panda is the size of a large black bear and built along bearlike lines. But its striking characteristic is color. The panda has a white face with small black patches around each eye, black ears, black feet and ankles. The rest of the animal is white except for a black saddle-like marking across the back at the shoulders.

Habits of the animals are not known. According to present belief, it is thought that it lives entirely on bamboo shoots. This factor would create a problem in the feeding of a captured panda.

Popular beliefs frequently turn out to be wrong when their scientific proof is attempted. Such is often true when the Department of

Poultrymen thought that when hens were developed to make high egg-laying records, such would result in the lessening of the quality of the eggs. This has been investigated and proved false.

The department researches show that there is no connection between the number of eggs a hen lays and the quality of the eggs.

CCC Starts 2d Year; Wants 120,000 Men

Success of Relief Plan May Result in Its Permanency

under the compulsory rotation system would provide perhaps 750,000 disciplined and muscle-hardened men.

Candidates for enrollment are being selected now by representatives of the Labor Department throughout the country from lists supplied largely by welfare agencies and other organizations in possession of unemployment relief rolls.

Under the regulations men must leave the camps after one year's service. Some 8,000 a month are dropping out to accept private jobs. In an authorized strength of 303,000 men there will be about 120,000 vacancies within the next few weeks. More than 550,000 men have been given work in the forest camps during the first year of operation. Under the law the camps have one more year of life.

May Be Made Permanent.

The system has worked so satisfactorily in the opinion of Administration officials and has accomplished so much useful work in addition to aiding the unemployed that it is expected some proposal for a permanent conservation corps will be presented to the next Congress.

These workers have built 17,000 miles of truck trails and 243,000 erosion dams to keep topsoil from washing away into rivers. They have spent 579,000 man-days in fire-fighting.

And it is no laughing matter to report that they have pulled up more than 80,000,000 wild gooseberry and currant bushes. It is in those bushes that the costly little pests known as the white pine blister rust spores, or germs, hatch. One of those little fellows can only fly 900 feet but when he and other numerous members of his immediate family land on a white pine tree, they dig into the bark and that is the end of the pine tree. So by pulling up every gooseberry and currant bush within 900 feet of a pine tree, the CCC workers are doing a wholesale birth control job on a microscopic tribe that menaces a natibnal stand of white pine valued at $420,000,000.

300,000 Families Aided.

Each month some 300,000 families are receiving $20 to $25 each sent by sons and relatives out of CCC pay.

Business is getting larger orders for supplies out of the camps. In the first eight months of CCC operations, $110,000,000 was spent on supplies which included: 14,000 trucks; 30,000 heating and cook stoves; 16,000 fire extinguishers; 1,500,000 pairs of shoes; 300,000 outfits of clothing complete from caps to underwear; 525,000 belts; 517,000 coats; 1,000,000 sheets; 651 tractors; 572 tractor-trail builders; several hundred tons of dynamite; 300,000 sets of toilet articles; 100,000 axes. Freight and passenger business given to the railroads by CCC has totaled more than $16,000,000. And surrounded by timber, the CCC bought 300,000,000 feet of lumber to build winter barracks.

Work done included planting of trees on 72,000,000 acres which is more than twice the area of New York State.

Lower Interest On D. C. Small Loans Urged

King Usury Bill Passage Given Approval of W. A. Roberts.

A graduated scale of interest rates which might be charged for small loans in the District was urged on the Senate District sub-committee yesterday by William A. Roberts, assistant corporation counsel.

No action was taken by the committee, of which Senator Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina, is chairman. Hearings will be resumed Tuesday morning.

Roberts proposed a scale of interest ranging from a maximum of 10 per cent on loans of $100 or less, 8 per cent on loans between $100 and $200, and 6 per cent on loans in excess of $200.

Other amendments to the pending King usury bill, which the sub-committee had under consideration, also were urged by Roberts. He proposed that the section of the bill authorizing charges for services, in addition to loans, be made specific. This would be necessary to prevent exorbitant charges on loans in the guise of commissions and other charges, in addition to legal interest rates.

As written, the bill permits additional "reasonable" charges for investigating reliability of the borrower, sufficiency of his security, investigation of titles, and other things. Roberts said he believed this section was too broad.

Senate Approves Cotton Rule Bill

was written into the bill by the Senate on motion of Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, and in the opinion of the sponsors of the bill diminishes the effectiveness of the measure.

It is almost certain the conferees will either eliminate this amendment or will reduce the minimum tax-free allocation for each farmer to less than six bales. The sponsors estimate 2,000,000 cotton farmers in the country and thus if each is allowed six bales, it would mean a crop of 12,000,000 bales, or 2,000,000 bales more than the maximum set by the bill.

Most Important Change.

This amendment now is regarded as the most important change made by the Senate, although when it was voted on Tuesday its effect was not fully realized. The Senate also limited the operation of the bill to this crop year, whereas the House bill made provisions for its continuance during two subsequent crop years.

Among the 46 Senators who voted for the bill were a number who expressed doubt as to the wisdom of the legislation but justified their votes on the ground that a majority of the cotton planters wanted the measure, that it might help to lift cotton prices.

Shortly before the bell for the final vote was rung Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, said that in voting for the measure he had "all fingers and toes crossed." Senator Hubert Stephens (Democrat), of Mississippi, said he was stirred by "misgivings" and by "doubts." Earlier in the week other supporters of the bill made similar statements.

Not a Brain Trust Bill.

Incidentally, this bill, regarded as one of the most revolutionary pieces of legislation to come out of the "new deal" did not originate with the "brain trust" or the Administration. It was inspired by the Bankhead brothers of Alabama—John H. in the Senate and William B. in the House.

In the Senate vote 42 Democrats joined by 4 Republicans voted for the measure. It was opposed by 13 Democrats and 26 Republicans. The Republicans who voted for the bill were Capper, of Kansas; Frazier and Nye, of North Dakota, and La Follette, of Wisconsin.

The Democrats who voted against the bill were Bailey, of North Carolina; Bulkley, of Ohio; Byrd and Glass, of Virginia; Clark, of Missouri; Coolidge and Walsh, of Massachusetts; Copeland and Wagner, of New York; Dieterich, of Illinois; King, of Utah, and Tydings, of Maryland.

In addition to above two changes, other amendments adopted by the Senate reduced the penalty of selling cotton without the proper tags and certificates from a fine of $1,000 and imprisonment for not more than one year to a fine of $100; increasing the penalty tax on excess cotton from 50 per cent to 75 per cent of the market price; exempting long staple cotton; making 200,000 bales the minimum allocation for any State and several other changes of a technical nature.

The Senate on motion of Senator King also struck from the measure provisions which would authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to buy surplus cotton to be used for experimental purposes and for relief.

SEE THE New 1934
Gas Refrigerator
BEFORE YOU BUY

Quick Facts about the New 1934 Air-Cooled GAS REFRIGERATOR

SPLIT SHELVES—Easily adjusted to accommodate tall bottles or an extra large roast.

TEMPERATURE CONTROL—Makes it possible to speed up freezing for frozen desserts or for quick ice cubes.

TRIGGER RELEASE TRAYS—Makes removal of ice trays easy. Simply lift the trigger and the tray slides out without a struggle.

INTERIOR LIGHTING—For those who want the interior automatically illuminated as you open the door.

LARGE ICE CUBE CAPACITY—To keep a generous supply of ice cubes always on hand. There is a large tray too, for freezing desserts and salads.

VEGETABLE FRESHENER—For preserving the natural content of vegetable moisture and to keep foods crisp, fresh and tasty.

It has the Four Biggest Advantages any Modern Refrigerator Offers!

A big statement? Yes, and something you should investigate thoroughly if you plan to buy an automatic refrigerator. That is why we urge you to "See the gas refrigerator before you buy." You will almost certainly find, like thousands of others in Washington, that it gives you more!

The gas refrigerator costs least to operate. A tiny gas flame circulates a simple refrigerant, which is hermetically sealed in rigid steel. This scientific principle has made possible a cost of operation lower than that of any other modern automatic refrigerator.

It is permanently silent. The gas refrigerator is not merely quiet. It is absolutely silent—permanently so. For it has nothing to vibrate or ever make noise. And it does not interfere with your radio reception.

It has no complicated machinery! Think what this means to you. Nothing to wear out or need repair. Just constant healthful food protection in a refrigerator that will last longer, give you more years of dependable service.

The gas industry has investigated and confirmed every claim made by the manufacturers for this remarkable refrigerator and enthusiastically recommends it. A visit to our showrooms will convince you that the new 1934 gas refrigerator is the refrigerator to buy!

Radio Waves and Ripples

MUSIC has charms.

Some of it may also have unpleasant memories for the people who play it.

Tschaikowsky's Second Symphony is avoided by Columbia's Andre Kostalenetz, for instance, in just about the same way that a less talented mortal might shun walking under a ladder. He was conducting the symphony at the St. Petersburg Opera in 1918 when, less than half way through, the music was drowned in a crescendo of shots and screams. It was the Russian revolution just breaking out.

Early associations also cause Freddie Rich to have jitters at a sound of any part of Tosti's "Goodbye" and "The Rosary." Once a thoughtless program director scheduled the former composition. Rich walked out of the studio leaving his first violinist in charge of the orchestra.

Howard Barlow, Columbia's symphony conductor, won't lead the overture to "Die Meistersinger." It reminds him of Aeolian Hall and of a certain evening there when, as he raised his baton for the Wagner number, he was overcome with a premonition that this would be his last appearance on that podium. The hall was torn down shortly afterward to make way for a modern skyscraper.

Equally inexplicable is Emery Deutsch's avoidance of "We Who Have Yearned Alone." Somehow or other, it always fills him with a distinct sense of fear.

In the case of Fred Waring, "Asa's Death" from Grieg's "Peer Gynt" Suite is the ill-omen number. And Mark Warnow steers clear of "Over There" and Ted Fiorito has been shy of Schubert's "Serenade" ever since the night he and the little lady parted.

AS retold during The Post's first "Headlines of Yesterday" show Monday night, Alfalfa Bill Murray's story of the Texas Ranger went something like this:

An Indian requested a deputy commissioner to issue him a gun. The commissioner inferred that the Indian probably wanted to shoot soldiers.

"Me no want kill soldiers," replied the Indian. "Me kill soldiers with stick. Me want kill Texas Ranger."

That may serve to give you a rough idea of the high regard in which Texas, or at least its Governor, Miriam "Ma" Ferguson, holds Washington's Kate Smith.

Gov. Ferguson commissioned Kate a Ranger the other night.

While waiting for the postoffice to get around to holding its dead letter office auction, National has come to the conclusion that a broadcast from the Government Printing Office might be as good a way as any of killing time.

It has decided, therefore, to send an announcer around next Wednesday to interview Public Printer George Carter from a background of roaring presses and clicking linotypes.

Questions to be asked Printer Carter are expected to disclose uncertainties in the printing and binding of the Congressional Record, Agriculture bulletins, &c.

A couple of "Don't Feed the Animals" signs would help the situation at WJSV as much as anything.

The menagerie now includes a parrot, two canaries and three turtles.

There was a salamander, but he walked off just before the third turtle arrived, probably to look up a nice quiet place where he could be alone.

District clubwomen have been given two more radio periods, this time on Columbia's WJSV beginning Tuesday and Thursday next week. Mrs. Effie M. Harvey, former educational director of WBBM, C. B. S.'s Chicago outlet, will be in charge.

At Last, in Book Form!

The Real Low-Down on the Higher-Ups of the "Roosevelt Revolution"!

IN a series of sensational chapters, The Unofficial Observer has taken apart the works that run the country and shown what makes them tick. He is a famous political correspondent who prefers to remain anonymous, the better to do the job. He has not praised or slammed, according to the technique of partisan skullduggery or the brainstorm of the moment. He hasn't taken to the keyhole of a political Winchell, to the muck-rake or the bludgeon.

But he hasn't hesitated to stick pins under toy balloons or to set firecrackers off under political tin-cans. He shows the fifty-odd key figures in this last round-up of American Democracy as they really are. He tells what they have done individually—what they have failed to do—how they get along with each other—what they are like as human beings.

Al Jolson to Make Personal Appearance With "Wonder Bar" Tomorrow at Earle

Star Comedian Scheduled for Only One Show

By Nelson B. Bell.

Perhaps the most important news of the moment to the playgoer and the motion picture addict—and they are extremely apt to be the same person—is that Al Jolson will arrive in Washington tomorrow to be present in person at the premiere in the Capital, his "home town," of the screen version of his stage hit, "Wonder Bar." This, of course, would be at the Earle Theater.

Sometime tomorrow night he will make one personal appearance at the Earle. The details are all a little vague, as yet, the only definite assurance the local Warner Brothers executives have received, up to time of writing, being that Al actually will be here.

In this space tomorrow morning it will no doubt be possible to set forth the exact hour of his arrival, the number of the track on which his train will pull in—and it is going to be just too bad for this prophesy if he flies down from New York!—where he will stop, what time he will receive the press (when, as and if) and the precise minute upon which he will step out on the Earle stage.

Here Last Summer.

In the meantime, it may be recalled that Al hasn't visited the old home town, otherwise than incognito, since last summer when he came down to help Gene Tunney, the literary leather-pusher, umpire the Congressional ball game out at Mr. Griffith's steel and concrete arena at Seventh and Florida avenue.

At the time of that visit, Al was still dynamite—as was recited next morning practically where you are reading now. His stories carried all the old zip, his personality lost none of its umph! and altogether he was a fine demonstration of what it takes to "get over" across those footlights.

It is an odd coincidence that I should have retailed a large amount of chatter concerning Al during that 15 minutes on the air over WJSV at 10 yesterday morning, because at that time I had not the remotest idea that he would be within miles of Washington any time this week.

Played From Sneak!

In fact, it would have been an odds-on propositoion that he would not be, because it has been bruited about persistently that Al sneaked into town a week or so ago, visited Capitol Hill, but permitted no one to know of his presence except a chosen few.

I take this with a large pinch of the old salt, because it doesn't sound in the least like the Al Jolson with whose career I have been on fairly intimate terms since way back yonder when he was a mere broth of a boy with Lew Dockstader's Minstrels, doing a bit on the end and a specialty in the olio.

And I'll wager you haven't thought of that word "olfo" since Rose Sydell and Her London Belles used to knock 'em dead down at Kernan's Lyceum!

Disquieting word comes from Hollywood that Dick Barthelmess, who has never earned a dollar in his life otherwise than in the movies, has been ordered to bed by his physicians who fear dire consequencies of an abscessed ear and heavy cold. Dick was in the midst of production on a new picture when forbidden further work for at least a week by his doctors.

Fox's Favorite Starlets.

The major producing companies seem to have gone in for picking their own prospective stars in a large way this year.

First Paramount ignored the impending selection of their "baby stars" by the WAMPAS and chose a list of several gifted young women on their own account whom they expect to see develop into stars of the first rank.

Now Fox has gone and done the same thing, entertaining some feelings of peevishness, one is led to believe, originating in real or imaginary slights extended the Fox lot on the occasion of previous WAMPAS choosings.

The Fox nominations for stellar honors include Alice Faye, of New York; Pat Paterson, London; Claire Trevor, New York; Rosemary Ames, Chicago, and Drue Leyton, recently of the New York stage, but born in Guadalajara, Mexico.

Miss Faye has appeared with Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees, and is with him again, by the way, in the picturization of the George White "Scandals;" Miss Paterson has had previous experience in England, and Miss Ames was a Chicago society girl.

So there!

It was our impression during his recent visit to Washington that Ramon Novarro was the most widely entertained movie star who ever made a stage appearance in the National Capital. We have since had to revise our opinion.

The honor undoubtedly belongs to Pete, the ring-eyed bull terrier of the "Our Gang" comedies. Pete, under the watchful chaperonage of Harry Lucenay, has been feted until he is beginning to get blue in the face like the big, bad wolf that huffed and puffed until he did himself no good whatever.

The only trouble is that Pete is on a diet and only sits up at the table and goes through the motions at all these luncheons, without ever getting his teeth into a decent bone!

Yesterday he was guest of the Young Democrats at the Mayflower and had himself quite a time but no eats!

What! No More Flappers?

A sagacious Hollywood observer makes note that cinematic youth has turned over a new leaf and gone safe and sane with what is tacitly known as a vengeance.

The incorrigible flapper that was Alice White, the "flaming youth" type that made Colleen Moore famous, the "Dancing Daughter" that was Joan Crawford, and the "It Girl" of Clara Bow have no counterparts on the screen today. Nobody is playing those roles any more, because there are no more roles of the sort to play.

The new girls, coming along to screen careers, are playing parts that allow them to be young and romantic, sweet and wholesome, without running the risk of being considered "quaint" or "old-fashioned." They can be spirited and intelligent, rather than merely young and wild and reckless.

New Types.

Sparkling youngsters like Jean Parker; poised young women like Evelyn Venable; sweet, wide-eyed personalties like Ruby Keeler; serious, serene young beauties like Jean Muir—these represent the girls of the post-depression era on the screen.

There are no strictly "hotcha" personalities in the youthful limelight. Ginger Rogers does that act in a comedy vein, but occasionally is seen also in the romantic moonlight-and-roses sort of thing. Even the youngsters who specialize in today's version of the flapper type are merely mildly flirtatious and nicely naughty.

This is a condition that has sneaked upon us so gradually and quietly that comparatively few seem to have noticed it.

But then, of course, there is always Mae West!

J. J. Shubert, Ben H. Atwell, Manager Stephen E. Cochran, of the National, and numerous others who have only spent their lifetimes in the theater, will confess to you today that they learned more about their business yesterday and last night than they had ever previously suspected. The answer is that the boys devoted virtually all their waking hours to attendance at the code authority hearings, where all of the perplexities, inequities and injustices of show business ostensibly are being ironed out. There seems to be just a trifle of doubt, however, as to who really is wielding the iron.

Piscatorial Note.

It looks as if the Senate might have made it pretty tough for the sailfish and barracuda by that vote last night!

Straight From the Studios

Bing Crosby, Claudette Colbert Costar in Musical; Writer and Husband Are Not Estranged; Gossip From Movie Lots.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, March 28.—As neat a combination of talents as one could wish is promised in "Here Is My Heart," long on the production chart as a Gary Cooper picture, but now to be filmed with Bing Crosby and Claudette Colbert. It will be a musical picture, and both stars will sing. Miss Colbert has warbled several times before, in "The Big Pond" and "The Torch Singer," and she personally liked the latter picture the best among the features she made. That wasn't, of course, on account of the singing alone, but because of the varied nature of the role.

JOAN CRAWFORD.

It looks as if Crosby is to have naught but prominent feminine stars as his opposites from now on. Miriam Hopkins will, of course, play in "She Loves Me Not," which follows "We're Not Dressing." After that will come "Here Is My Heart."

Meanwhile Gary Cooper will appear in "Honor Bright," with Frances Drake, and there is a fair chance that Shirley Temple will have the child role in this. She is being highly approved for her work in "Half Way Decent," formerly called "Little Miss Marker." "Honor Bright" depends pretty largely on the little girl portrayal.

Joan to Play Mannequin.

Paris chiefly, and other parts of Europe, will be the setting for Joan Crawford's next screen effort following "Sadie McKee." The picture is from an original, and will be called "Undress Parade.' It is to be a style affair, and Miss Crawford will play an American mannequin, who is engaged abroad. Originally it was intended that Joan would enact an artist's model in the picturization of "Sacred and Profane Love," but that has been postponed.

Picture Pageant Now Passing.

Muriel Evans will appear in "Manhattan Melodrama," with William Powell, Clark Gable and Myrna Loy.

Ned Sparks is in "Down to Their Last Yacht;" Warren Hymer, in "It Ain't No Sin" and "Half Way Decent."

Ann Sothern, who is finishing "The Party's Over" Monday, will play opposite Robert Armstrong in "The Hell Cat," beginning Wednesday.

By Grace Kingsley.

Hollywood, March 28.—There is no more truth to the report of an actual separation between the writer, Adela Rogers St. Johns, and Dick Hyland, former football star, than there is that one is imminent. This is the word wired recently from New York by Miss St. Johns.

EDNA BEST.

True, Miss St. Johns and her husband have been separated for the past six months, but it is only a professional separation, she says. Business has kept Hyland in Florida, and his wife in New York, her explanation continues.

And the reason she has been so much in the company, in New York lately, of Rudy Vallee is because she is writing his life story for a magazine.

Food and Food On the Set.

Colin Clive and Edna Best indulge in somewhat of a repast to make one scene for "The Key" at Warner Brothers. The property man had to cook for them eight tender and juicy tenderloin steaks before the scene was approved. At the same time they also finished four cans of peas, eighteen cups of coffee and a loaf of bread. Everything for this particular meal had to be served fresh.

The Wrong Tune.

Edmund Goulding considers himself somewhat of a song writer. Now and then he writes a tune in his spare time and then requests it be played the next day on the set. Robert Montgomery heard Goulding had written a new one. He indulged in a bit of skullduggery with the musicians, so that stage was set when Norma Shearer and the rest of the cast arrived for work in "Lady Mary's Lover."

The musicians struck up the tune. Goulding swayed with it, delighted. "Isn't that a fine, beautiful number I wrote?"

"It was 'Smoke Rings' when I heard it on the radio last night," squelched Montgomery.

Lenten Season Ends With Ace Bills on View

Theaters Announce Varied Programs to Celebrate Easter Week.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

The history of the current Holy Week, and in large measure of the entire Lenten season, is proving contradictory of every accepted notion of the effect of these periods of sacred observance upon the box-offices of the theaters.

During the present week, reputedly—and, in the broad view, logically so—one of the worst in the year from the standpoint of theater patronage, extraordinary attendance records have been established. The fifth week of "It Happened One Night," the bill at Loew's Fox, featuring Phil Spitalny and the best women's band ever heard on a Washington stage; Mme. Maria Jeritza in Friml's "Annina," at the National; Jimmy Cagney at the Earle, all these and others have rung up receipts out of all proportion to the normal expectations of any Holy week.

With the coming of Easter, of course, what a terse vernacular pleases to call "show business" receives a decided spring impetus. With this resurgence of prosperity, the various theater managements wisely put their best wares in their showcases.

Thus at the National next week will be seen "Richard of Bordeaux," starring Dennis King in the non-singing title role, supported by an able cast. "Richard of Bordeaux" sets forth the romantic story of the last of the Plantagenet kings. The play was written by Gordon Daviot and comes to the Capital after a successful New York engagement.

• • • •

For Easter Week at the Belasco, Pauline Frederick will return to the local stage—and one she has trod numerous times before—in "Her Majesty, the Widow," which will be presented at popular prices in consonance with the new policy in vogue since the reopening of the Lafayette Square house. Miss Frederick will be supported by Thomas Beck, Frederick Bell, Laurette Bullivant and a cast of note.

• • • •

Down at the Gayety, Manager Jimmy Lake announces as his Easter Week attraction another veteran funster of the smoker circuits in the person of Frank X. Silk, who will present his "Silk Stocking Revue," with Edna Dee the featured feminine artiste.

• • • •

At the Earle, "Wonder Bar," the picturization of Al Jolson's stage hit, will be the screen feature of the bill, with Al Jolson, Kay Francis, Dolores Del Rio, Dick Powell, Fifi D'Orsay, Ricardo Cortez prominent in the cast. The stage portion of the program will be headlined by Charlie Melson and also will include Gine, DeQuincy and Lewis, dancers; Carlton Emmy and his "Mad Wags" and J. Fred Coots and Olive Sibley in a cycle of Mr. Coots' songs.

• • • •

The Fox filmization of George White's "Scandals," as the screen feature, and Thurston, the magician, assisted by his daughter Jane, on the stage, will share Easter honors at Loew's Fox. In the picturized "Scandals" will be found George White, himself, Rudy Vallee, Jimmy Durante, Cliff Edwards, Adrienne Ames, Alice Faye and a large group of supporting players and a typical "Scandals" beauty chorus.

• • • •

RKO-Keith's, following five weeks of "It Happened One Night," beginning Friday, will present Frank Buck's sequel to "Bring 'em Back Alive," another thriller of the Malay jungles, bearing the title of "Wild Cargo." The cast is composed principally of Mr. Buck and the denizens of the wilds.

• • • •

On Saturday, at the Metropolitan, will be given the world premiere showing of "No Greater Glory," the film version of Ferenc Molnar's "The Paul Street Boys." In this subject a cast composed for the greater part of juvenile actors contains several well-known names and several that have never before been heard of. The usual auxiliaries will round out the two-and-a-half hour bill.

• • • •

Opening day at the Rialto, Paul Page and Fay Wray will be seen in a new picture bearing the significant title of "The Countess of Monte Cristo." The title should be index enough of the character of the story. The bill will be augmented by the usual shorter screen features.

• • • •

Norma Shearer, Robert Montgomery and Herbert Marshall are the principal players in "Riptide," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer produetion opening at Loew's Palace tomorrow. The story is described as one of many highly dramatic qualities in which the principal players are supported by a competent cast. Short-reels will supplement the major feature.

• • • •

Following its successful presentation during an earlier F street engagement, Loew's Columbia, beginning tomorrow, will offer Will Rogers, supported by Evelyn Venable, Louise Dresser, Kent Taylor and Charles Middleton in "David Harum," the film version of the Edward Noyes Westcott novel. The customary supplementaries will surround the feature.

Quiet Campaign Marks Commissioner and Burgess Race.

Middletown, Md., March 29 (Spl.). Taking advantage of Middletown's election laws, which provide that any one desiring to seek office may do so by presenting a petition with names of 40 voters to the Town Register within four days of election, Charles B. Darner, member of the present board of commissioners, filed notice today as a candidate for reelection.

Darner was defeated for renomination Friday night. Several years ago, after failing to win the nomination, he entered the race by petition, and was elected.

The campaign will come to a close Monday with the election of a Burgess for one year, and three commissioners for two years. While the candidates themselves have done little campaigning so far, friends of various nominees are busy.

In some quarters the fact that Middletown secured only one small CWA project is being used against certain of the old members of the board.

The proposed new reservoir for Middletown is the principal issue of the campaign against these old officials. It is contended that had the officials submitted the reservoir project in time, it would have given jobs to 50 men for several months, with an expenditure of approximately $15,000 in this community.

The commissioner ticket will be composed of Mr. Darner, Edgar H. Koogle, L. Osmond Derr, incumbents, Floyd M. Main, J. Frank Fox, Millard C. Coblentz and S. Leslie Shafer, sr.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's mother on Nineteenth street.

Mrs. Lynn, mother of the bride, wore a gown of beige lace with brown accessories, and Mrs. Knox, mother of the bridegroom, wore a gown of brown lace with accessories to match. Both wore shoulder bouquets of orchids.

Navy Blue Traveling Costume.

After the reception Mr. Knox and his bride left for a wedding trip, the latter wearing a navy blue suit with a white chiffon blouse, with accessories to match, and a blue coat trimmed with blue fox.

A Bid That Cost a Championship.

I have so often told the story of my intense admiration for the bidding and play of my favorite male bridge partner, "Teddy" Lightner, who has played with me in many a hard-fought match, that I feel I am justified in telling the story of his costly Penalty Double which, if it did not cost our team the championship in the recent Grand Nationals of the United States Bridge Association, made certain that we would not play off with the eventual winners, and, in passing, it might be said that the play of the hand gave to a rising young star, Mr. Sydney Rusinow, a chance to show that his game is sound, both in bidding and play.

The hand was played in a team-of-four match.

West, Dealer,

1—A semi-psychic effort to inhibit East and West.
2—Mr. Rusinow senses that there is something wrong with the picture. If South can not keep the bid of one open, then probably East has made a strategic pass.
3—A feeble attempt to maintain the illusion of strength. Even if doubled, the loss probably will not greatly exceed the value of a vulnerable game.
4—Showing a strong hand, as the response is free, not forced.
5—A gamble, but worth while. There is a refuge in clubs.
6—Why Teddy chose this moment to double, I'll never know. His own explanation, "a brainstorm," is perhaps as good as any.
7—Digging the pit even deeper.

My Opening lead was a small spade, and Mr. Rusinow made every trick, for a score of 2,500 points, effectually eliminating my team.

While, as the historian, I must recount this hand and its result, it is but fair to say that I too have made bad bids and bad Doubles, and that I still like "Teddy's" game.

Lingerie Sets Aid to Rushed Clock Punchers

All-In-One Affair Is Help to Quick and Easy Dressing.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Step-ins, slip, and brassiere all in one is the chief drawing card at a certain F street shop these days.

The schoolgirl valiantly struggling to be on time for the early class, the professional woman who punches the clock, or the lady of leisure who must keep appointments, all see in this set a means of saving time.

No matter how close the race between the hands of the clock and ourselves, the odds are with us if we minimize the intricacies of our wardrobe by such a complete combination. One count for out of bed, one count for slip, step-ins, and brassiere, another for the dress, and we're all ready but the shoes and stockings.

These sets are made of high-quality silk. The brassiere tops are designed in a one-way-stretch material, made of cotton yarn woven with lastex.

Besides coming in the triple combinations, they're also available in the shadow panel slips with the brassiere tops. Colors, white and tearose.

Super-strong and Weather-proof.

Vases, pitchers, with chipped handles, picture frames with loose joints, a hundred little loose and dangling ends around the house can be so successfully glued together with this product the proverbial king's horses can't pull them apart again.

Happy Accident.

The blue pottery occupying the center of the stage in a local shop has more to recommend it than its peculiar steel blue color. For, unlike any that's appeared here before, this has contrasting natural lining.

Some say the design originated by accident. In the factory out in Kansas, where the pottery is made, one young man carefully tinted the exterior of a large, particularly lovely bowl and put it aside to complete next day. But in his case tomorrow never came, for at the end of the day he was notified "his services were no longer required."

The bowl, along with a shipment of vases, was sent to a Southern city. When the proprietor of the shop there saw it, he was so struck by its unique appearance he immediately ordered more like it.

In that way the "accident" came to the attention of the factory heads, and they investigated to uncover the mystery.

More pottery was turned out in this unfinished fashion and more orders poured in.

The young man was summoned, reinstated, given a raise and put in charge of this new pottery section.

It'll Bring You Luck.

The "good fairy" is a symbolic statuette which has just made its appearance in an F street store. It is the figure of a young woman standing with her arms outstretched and her head held high. Its significance is explained in an accompanying poem, pointing out here is the personification of beauty in nature, the happiness in children's laughter, of "those spiritual things which radiate throughout the universe"—the sum total of life.

This "good fairy" is supposed to carry a lot of luck with her. At this time of the year, when shoppers are on the lookout for appropriate remembrances for friends, the "sprite" is coming in for her share of popularity.

Double Life Table.

The gift section of a downtown store has a truly remarkable table value. A collapsible teakwood frame and two brass trays form the upper and lower to a coktail or smoking table.

When it isn't in use, it's a simple matter to fold up the frame and tuck it out of sight, and to use trays for serving or side ornaments. Its amazing price—$2.95.

Mrs. Roosevelt, her daughter, Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, and her granddaughter, "Sistie," strolling with the dogs, among the thousands of children and grown-ups at the famous Easter Monday egg-rolling last year. Plans this year are announced to be equally hospitable and "Buzzie" probably will be with the group next Monday.

President, Mrs. Roosevelt to Greet Youngsters Easter Monday.

THOUSANDS of Washington children and their mothers are reading the Weather Man's forecastings with increasing anxiety as the day of days, a distinctly Washington holiday for children, draws near.

If only the sun will shine and the ground be firm and not soggy next Monday!

For Easter Monday has long been established as Easter Egg-Rolling Day at the White House.

Already plans have been made within the President's home. It is announced they are the same as last year. Both the President and Mrs. Roosevelt plan to greet the young guests in their famous backyard and they intend to have "Sistie" and "Buzzie" with them, the two having recovered, beyond quarantine limits, from the measles.

Again it is planned to erect a May-pole and have dances and London Bridge, egg-"picking" and egg-rolling. The Girl Scouts and the Boys' Band are practicing for the occasion.

It is customary of an Easter Monday morning from 9:30 o'clock until late afternoon to see street cars and buses spill masses of wriggling, happy children into the streets to bounce gaily through the tall iron gates of the White House carrying baskets.

Old Scotch Custom.

The sport of egg-rolling, so definitely a Washington and not a National custom, is said to have been introduced in the National Capital by some Scotch folk who made their homes here. It is an old Scotch custom, according to an article published in a local newspaper in 1891, to roll bannocks (wheel-shaped cakes of oatmeal) down hills at Easter-time. When, with the evolution of food tastes in the new country, bannocks went out of style, eggs were substituted. So began Washington's egg-rolling.

The Capitol Grounds were first choice for these activities, not the White House. The steep grassy slopes of the west side of the Capitol were particularly inviting for successful egg-rolling. In those days, when Ulysses S. Grant was President, "as many as 5,000 children" were reported as "gamboling on the green" there.

Moved From Capitol.

Two years later when Hayes was President, children and their egg-rolling activities were forcibly moved from the Capitol to the White House. This was due to an act of Congress approved April 29, 1876, stating—"it is made the duty of the Capitol police hereafter to prevent any portion of the Capitol Grounds and terraces from being used as a playground or otherwise so far as may be necessary to protect public property, turf and grass from injury."

On Monday, April 22, 1878, a Washington paper reported in a column of "Local Items"—"Driven out of the Capitol Grounds, children advanced on the White House Grounds today and rolled eggs down terraces at the back of the mansion and played among the shrubbery to their hearts' content."

There is no record who was the Pied Piper to transplant the children's egg-rolling from Capitol to White House, but the White House has remained the most popular place for this traditional sport of Washington children. The Zoo, Potomac and Rock Creek Parks, and hilly slopes of many private homes, also provide inspiration for egg-rolling for hundreds of children, but the White House attracts them by the thousands. The highest number was reached in 1930, when a record of 48,300 children and grown-ups passed through the gates.

It is a real job on late Easter Monday and most of Easter Tuesday for the 20 men and women who tidy up the President's back yard after the egg-rolling party. Last year about 200 lost articles were turned in to the police—mostly hats, overshoes, coats, &c., though one diamond brooch, valued at $10,000, was reported lost.

Invariably a number of youngsters eat many more hard-boiled eggs than they should. The emergency tent, erected in the grounds each Easter Monday to take care of just such cases, had 56 children treated by nurses and doctors from Emergency Hospital and the Red Cross. One was treated for a black eye when a purple egg went wild of its intended mark.

In Washington, Easter egg-rolling symbolizes the joy of the city's children in getting out of tall apartment houses and rows of houses where radiators have sizzled overtime this year, and renewing acquaintance with mother earth's firm blanket—the best playground in all the world.

Last Easter Monday 47,000 Washington children and grown-ups attended the egg-rolling at the White House. At 5 o'clock in the afternoon when the U. S. Marine Band concluded the "Star-Spangled Banner," slow lines of bedraggled small boys and girls with heavy eye-lids, dirty hands, and tummies full of eggs they had brought down in their baskets, stumbled sleepily and happily out of the grounds at the heels of exhausted parents.

Ham Is to Easter What Turkey Is to Thanksgiving

While Russian and Italian Chefs Are Preparing Their National Easter Dishes, Blini and Panetone, Housewives Here Plan Their Hams.

By Susan Mills.

ALL OVER THE WORLD cooks are busy preparing the Easter feast. With the coming of spring, the first green on the grass, the indefinable freshness in the air, culinary aprons are tied tighter, and culinary minds receive new inspiration.

In Russia cooks are preparing the traditional Easter pancakes, blini. In Rome, bakers are making the cake, panetone. The world is getting ready to eat, drink and be merry.

For generations, Washington's traditional Easter celebration has been the breakfast, or the Easter luncheon. For this event diplomatic doors are opened to family and friends and prominent hostesses invite scores of guests to their homes.

Traditional Recipe.

For generations the traditional American Easter dish has been ham. Russians have their blini; Romans, their panetone; Americans, their ham.

A traditional dish well merits a traditional recipe. Here is an old recipe for stuffed ham. It is reprinted from the book, "Eat, Drink and Be Merry in Maryland," by Frederick Philip Stieff, and the recipe is given by Mr. J. F. Coad, A. M., Cherrysfield Manor, St. Marys County, Md.

"Hams of twelve pounds or more are best to use for 'stuffed ham,' a popular dish with southern Marylanders, particularly at Easter. The ham to be used is best when less than a year old.

"For a 16 pound ham use one peck of greens; cabbage sprouts, turnip greens or kale, two bunches of spring onions or their equivalent in chives, red and black pepper, and celery seed.

"Allow 15 minutes per pound after the ham starts boiling and cook steadily until three-fourths done. Then put aside to partly cool while the greens scald in the ham liquor. When well wilted, take greens up and chop well. Season greens with celery seed and pepper to taste.

Stuff in Greens.

"Then with a sharp knife cut crescent-shaped openings in the ham, top and bottom, as deep as the knife will go. Stuff the mixture of greens in the incision, as much as they will hold. Make as many incisions as the ham will conveniently take.

"Fold in a stout cloth and sew fast. Replace ham in the boiling liquor for the remaining quarter of time allowed for cooking. Cool in the liquor, and when thoroughly cold, it is ready for use. Keep cloth on the ham to preserve the moisture and keep in a cool place. It is truly a dish for the gods."

The menu to be built around the ham should be determined by the tastes of your family, but a few suggestions might be helpful.

Make Use of Garlic.

With the ham, serve new potatoes, either in a cream sauce or parsley butter and new asparagus covered with melted butter and a dash of paprika. Have you ever rubbed your pan with a clove of garlic before you melted the butter to be poured over green vegetables? Try it and see if it doesn't add a certain delicious flavor.

Since Easter and April Fool's Day are doubling up on each other this year, fool the family with this dessert.

Make, or buy, individual cup cakes and fill them with fruit or ice cream. Remove the top of the cakes and with a fork hollow out the inside. If you fill with fresh fruit, such as strawberries, or a mixture of fruits, mix it with a little whipped cream first. After the cavity has been filled, put the top back on the cake. Ice the tops with whipped cream and sprinkle with tiny candied Easter eggs. If you want to be very festive, perch a small cotton chicken on the top of each. The family won't know what to expect until the first fork is plunged into the dainty.

With this dessert, coffee, nuts and mints would make a palatable finish.

Students Pledge to Cut Off Heads in Petition

A petition was circulated on the campus to learn how many undergraduates read what they signed. The 500 didn't. At the bottom of a request for an extra holiday was: "We are resolved to spend the day in merrymaking and leisure at which time each one will decapitate himself with extreme joy."

What Today Means

"Aries."

If March 30 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 to 11 a. m., from 1 to 3 p. m. and from 4 to 6 p. m. The danger periods are from 6 to 8 a. m., from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. and from 8 to 10 p. m.

The child born on March 30, as it grows up, will display a great deal of initiativeness. The originality of some of its ideas will be rather startling, and for the most part will be of a practical nature. Music will have a special appeal for children whose natal day is celebrated on this date. Ready obedience is one of their principal characteristics, and will prove of great help in their school career.

People born on March 30 are generally the type ready to lend a helping hand. They seldom turn a deaf ear to a worthy appeal, and frequently go out of the way to try and help those less fortunate. They apparently come from unusually sturdy stock, for they are exceptionally free, as a general thing, from the ailments claimed by so many men and women. It would not be surprising to discover Methuselah was born on this date, judging from the longevity enjoyed by so many whose birthday falls on it. The stage, literature, and educational work are excellent fields of endeavor for those who celebrate this as a birth anniversary.

Husband Likes Wife Sans Her Crowning Glory

Approves as She Wears Wigs to Match Her Gowns.

New York, March 26 (Spl.).—The movement started by Mrs. Lucy Cotton Thomas to make all women bald and induce them to use wigs has the unqualified approval of Mrs. Thomas' fourth husband, William M. F. Magraw.

Having her hair cut off entirely, as a gesture of revolt against dictates of expensive hair dressers, Mrs. Thomas plans to wear wigs of various tints to harmonize with her gowns.

Although this step was taken without either the consent or knowledge of her husband, he is as enthusiastic about the idea as if it were his own.

Beauty Invulnerable.

"Mrs. Thomas has a small, oval face and perfect nose," he explained, "which are lovely regardless of her hair, but she intends to let it grow until it is long enough to curl again. For color she will wear transformations. She has a silver-platinum wig now. In it she looks like Marie Antoinette. If she wants to wear red, green or purple hair, it is all one with me, for I know she will choose whatever shade will best enhance her features."

An Old Opera Custom.

He called attention to the fact that opera singers had long been doing what Mrs. Thomas plans to do, wearing wigs to fit their costumes.

In closing his discussion of beautiful coiffures, Mr. Magraw brought in a few words about the comforts in baldness for men. Having lost all of his hair about a year ago, he spoke with authority of how much time was saved since he no longer had to bother with barbers.

Mr. Magraw, head of a sprinkler system concern, was married to Mrs. Thomas in February, 1933. Mrs. Thomas is the widow of Edward R. Thomas, former publisher of The Morning Telegraph and the former wife of the late Col. Lytton Ament and of Charles Hann, jr., lawyer.

Boys' Cooking Club Will Give Dinner

Will Demonstrate Ability In Culinary Art.

Middletown, Md., March 29 (Spl.). Members of the Boys Cooking Club of the Middletown High School will demonstrate their ability in culinary art April 9, when the annual meeting of the Frederick County High School principals will be held here.

The boys will be hosts at a dinner prepared and served entirely by them, under the direction of Miss Marian Egolf, home economics instructor at the school.

This cooking club, which is comprised of boys between the ages of 14 and 17, is the only one of its kind in the county. It was organized three years ago at the request of the boys of the school. The objects of the club are:

To learn a few facts concerning every-day foods; to know how to select a wholesome, well-balanced meal; to learn to prepare simple foods; to set up standards of table manners; to realize the need for good habits and to secure a keen appreciation of the home.

How to Keep Well

Arsenic in Insect Sprays.

In order to protect himself against insect enemies man is compelled to expose himself increasingly to poisons

Few farmers are justified in attempting to raise crops without protecting themselves against bankruptcy by spraying. This time, the person endangered is the user of tobacco. Tobacco growers must use arsenic sprays.

There seems to be no satisfactory way of ridding sprayed tobacco of its arsenic before making it into a marketable product. If there be it has not come into general use and it has been 7 years since Remington demonstrated the presence of arsenic in smoking and chewing tobacco.

His obesrvations have recently been confirmed and extended by Gross and Nelson of the U. S. Bureau of Chemistry.

Gross and Nelson found the amount of arsenic in the unburned tobacco, the unpuffed smoke, the puffed smoke, and the butts.

The butts contained considerably more than the smoke and so did the pipe juice. The conclusion to be drawn from this last observation is that if a man smokes a pipe he had better clean it frequently. If he smokes cigarettes and cigars he had better not smoke them close. He ought to throw away a pretty good-sized butt.

The Dragon Murder Case

By S. S. Van Dine

The Story Thus Far.

Philo Vance and District Attorney Markham, with Sergt. Heath, are investigating the strange disappearance of Sanford Montague in the old Dragon Pool of the Stamm estate. According to Leland, one of Stamm's guests, each member of the house party had sufficient motive to murder Montague with the exception of Bernice Stamm, to whom he was engaged. Stamm himself was hopelessly intoxicated at the time of the tragedy and every one else was standing beside the pool. Stamm's mother, who is mentally unbalanced, insists that "the dragon" removed Montague because he was "an enemy of the family."

The following morning the pool is drained, but there is no sign of a body. Instead Vance finds the imprint of a scaly hoof and a huge, three-taloned claw. A chance remark of Mrs. Stamm leads Vance to an ancient pothole beyond the pool, where he finds Montague's mutilated body.

"I can't combat your logic, Markham. It's unassailable. The vault doesn't fit in at all. • • • Only," he added wistfully, "I do wish it had been built on some other part of the estate. It bothers me no end. It's situated, d'ye see, almost on a direct line between the house here and the gate down the East road. And along that line is the plot of low ground which is the only means of egress from the pool."

"You're talking nonsense," Markham said hotly. "You'll be babbling next of relativity of the bending of light rays."

"There are various things I should like to do now," Vance returned. "I want to ask Leland a question or two. I crave verbal intercourse with young Tatum. And I'm positively longin' to inspect Stamm's collection of tropical fish—oh, principally the fish. Silly—eh, what?"

Markham Makes Wry Face.

"Which shall it be first?" he asked with ungracious resignation.

Vance rose and stretched his legs. "Leland. The man is full of information and pertinent suggestions."

Heath rose with alacrity and went to fetch him.

Leland looked troubled when he came into the drawing room.

"Greeff and Tatum almost came to blows a moment ago," he told us. "They accused each other of having something to do with Montague's disappearance. And Tatum intimated strongly that Greeff had not been sincere in his search for Montague in the pool last night. I do not know what he was driving at, but Greeff became livid with anger, and only the combined efforts of Dr. Holliday and myself prevented him from attacking Tatum."

"That's most revealin'," murmured Vance. "By the by, have Stamm and Greeff reconciled their differences?"

Leland shook his head slowly.

"I am afraid not. There has been bad blood between them all day. Stamm meant all the things he said to Greeff last night—he was just in the frame of mind to let down the barriers of his emotions and blurt the truth—or, rather, what he believed to be the truth. I do not pretend to understand the relationship.

Vance walked to the window and looked out into the brilliant sunlight.

"Do you happen to know," he asked, without turning, "what Mrs. Stamm's sentiments toward Greeff are?"

Greeff Disliked.

"Mrs. Stamm does not like Greeff," he returned. "I heard her warn Stamm against him less than a month ago."

"You think she regards Greeff as an enemy of the Stamms?"

"Undoubtedly—though the reason for her prejudice is something I do not understand. She knows a great deal, however, that the other members of the household little suspect."

Vance slowly turned from the window and walked back to the fireplace.

"Speaking of Greeff," he said, "how long was he actually in the pool during the search for Montague?"

Leland seemed taken aback by the question.

"Really, I could not say. I dived in first and Greeff and Tatum followed suit. • • • It might have been 10 minutes—perhaps longer."

A startled look came into Leland's face.

"No, he did not," he returned with great seriousness. "He dived once or twice, as I recall, and then swam across to the shallow water behind the cliffs. I remember his calling to me from the darkness there and telling me he had found nothing. Tatum remembered the episode a while ago—it was doubtless the basis for his accusing Greeff of having a hand in Montague's disappearance."

The man paused and then slowly shook his head, as if throwing off an unpleasant conclusion that had forced itself upon him. "But I think Tatum is wrong. Greeff is not a good swimmer, and I imagine he felt safer with his feet on the ground. It was natural for him to go to the shallow water."

"How long after Greeff called to you did he return to this side of the pool?"

Leland hesitated.

"I really do not remember. I was frightfully upset, and the actual chronology of events during that time was confused. I recall only that when I eventually gave up the search and climbed back on the retaining wall, Greeff followed shortly afterward. Tatum, by the way, was the first out of the water. he had been drinking a lot, and was not in the best condition. He seemed pretty well exhausted."

"But Tatum did not swim across the pool?"

"Oh, no. He and I kept in touch the whole time. I will say this for him—little as I like him—he showed considerable courage and stamina during our search for Montague; and he kept his head."

"I'm looking forward to talking with Tatum. Y' know, I haven't seen him yet. Your description of him rather prejudiced me against him, and I was hopin' to avoid him entirely. But now he has added new zest to the affair. • • • Battling with Greeff, what? Fancy that. Greeff is certainly non persona grata in this domicile. No one loves him. Sad • • • sad. • • •"

Vance sat down again and lighted another cigarette. Leland watched him curiously but said nothing. Vance looked up after a while and asked abruptly:

"What do you know of the key to the vault?"

I expected Leland to show some astonishment at this question, but his stoical expression did not change; he seemed to regard Vance's query as both commonplace and natural.

"I know nothing of it," he said, "except what Stamm told me. It was lost years ago, but Mrs. Stamm claims that she has hidden it. I have not seen it since I was quite a young man."

"Ah! You have seen it, then. And you would know it if you saw it again?"

"Yes, the key is quite unmistakable," Leland returned. "The bow was of curious scroll work, somewhat Japanese in design. The stem was very long—perhaps 6 inches—and the bit was shaped like a large "S." In the old days the key was always kept hanging on a hook over Joshua Stamm's desk in the den. • • • Mrs. Stamm may or may not know where it is now. But does it really matter?"

"I suppose not," Vance murmured. "And I'm most grateful to you for your help. The medical examiner as you know, is on his way here, and I'd jolly well like to have a few words with Tatum in the interim. Would you mind asking him to come here?"

(Sunday, August 12, 3 P. M.)

Kirwin Tatum was a man in his early thirties, slender, wiry and loose-jointed. His face was thin and skeleton-like and, as he stood at the drawing room door that Sunday afternoon, staring at us, there was a bloodless, haggard look in his expression which may have been the result of fright or of the ravages of his recent dissipation. But there was a sullen craftiness in his eyes which was almost vulpine. His blond hair, heavily pomaded, was brushed straight back from a peaked forehead with sloping parietals. From one corner of his feral thin-lipped mouth a cigarette drooped. He was dressed in sport clothes of gay and elaborate design; and a heavy gold chain bracelet hung loosely on his left wrist. He stood in the doorway for several minutes, gazing at us shiftily, his long spatulate fingers moving nervously at his sides. That he was uneasy and afraid was apparent.

Vance regarded him with critical coldness, as he might have inspected some specimen in a laboratory. Then he waved his hand toward a chair beside the table.

"Come in and sit down, Tatum." His tone was at once condescending and peremptory.

The man moved forward with a shambling gait and threw himself into the chair with affected nonchalance.

"Well, what do you want?" he asked, with a show of spirit, glancing about the room.

"I understand you play the piano," remarked Vance.

"Say, what is this—a game of some kind?"

Vance nodded gravely.

"Yes—and a dashed serious game. You were a bit unsettled, we have been told, by the disappearance of your rival, Mr. Montague."

"Unsettled?" Tatum nervously relighted his cigarette, which had gone out. Vance had thrown him off his guard, and his deliberate and prolonged pause patently indicated that he was endeavoring to readjust his equilibrium. "Well, why not? But I haven't been shedding crocodile tears over Monty, if that's what you mean. He was a rotter, and it's just as well, for everybody, that he is out of the way."

Do you think he will ever return? asked Vance casually.

Tatum made an unpleasant noise in his throat, which was probably intended to be a scornful laugh.

"No, he won't show up again—because he can't. You don't think he planned the disappearance himself, do you? He didn't have enough sense—or courage. It meant going out of the limelight; and Monty couldn't live or breathe unless he was in the limelight. • • • Somebody got him!"

"Who do you think it was?"

"How should I know?"

"Do you think it was Greeff?"

Tatum's eyes half closed, and a cold, hard look spread over his drawn face.

"It might have been Greeff," the man said, between his teeth. "He had ample reason."

"And didn't you yourself have 'ample reason?'" Vance returned quietly.

Low Pay, Hard Work Lot of Artist's Models

Many of Them Earning Way While Studying Art, But There Is One Whose Dream Is to Become Stenographer.

Posing for artists is the most difficult job in the modeling business. It means long minutes of absolute rigidity, few rest periods, small salaries. Some of the subjects for paintings and drawings tell about their jobs today in the third of a series of four features on models. The final story will appear in The Washington Post tomorrow.

By Elenore Kellogg.

NEW YORK, March 29 (AP).—Young Venuses who pose for artists are both heavier and more serious minded than other types of models.

Many of them are earning their way while studying art. One is a medical student and one wants to become a stenographer.

Hard-working young women, who must stand motionless for 25 minutes at a time, they are lucky in earning as much as $25 weekly.

Serious-Minded Artists.

"One young man complained because the model was flirting with the class," said Miss Anna Clarke, executive secretary of the Art Students' League, "and he was the sort of young man who ordinarily would like flirting with a pretty girl. They're all serious-minded here."

Miss Clarke led the way through underground regions of the league's building to a studio where Pauline Page, of San Francisco, was posing for a sculpture class. Miss Page, tall and dark-haired, was glad to limber up her cramped muscles and comment that "prancing in clothes would be a pleasure compared with this—it's hard work."

"I study painting in the morning and pose afternoons to earn money," she said. "Most of the models I know are studying sculpture or art.

"There's some truth in the popular idea about the glamorous life of a model, but it's not nearly so romantic as most people picture it. The same is true of the stage or dancing.

"Modeling is lots more interesting than being a stenographer or a school teacher. It is interesting for me because I can learn quite a lot about art work."

Stenographic Ambitions.

Being a stenographer, however, is an unattainable dream for Miss Evelyn Schmitka, who said she was posing to "earn a living," but really wants to do office or social work.

"But I earn $20 to $25 a week as a model, and I'd only get $15 in an office as a beginner," she said.

She complained that posing "doesn't give you any mental stimulus" and is difficult, too. "I'm interested in art but I can't afford to study yet," she said, and added her art work had won prizes in high school.

There is one girl model who might pose on the dais, but she doesn't because the advertising field pays her better. She is Grace Moore, frequently called to pose for bathing suits and "intimate" apparel photographs.

The art school rate is 50 cents an hour for portrait work and 75 cents in life classes, although the league is now inaugurating a system of giving its models a flat $20 weekly.

"And don't let anyone tell you they pose for head and shoulders only," warned Miss Clarke. "Those shoulders go all the way to their toes."

Women Held Negligent Over Legal Status

Said to Be Too Unselfish; Rectify Other Problems Than Their Own.

Women have been so busy thinking about other people's problems and doing good deeds they have neglected entirely the serious matter of their own legal status, according to Mrs. Max Rotter, of Milwaukee, Wis.

Mrs. Rotter is the guest of the National Woman's Party here for a few days. She is working to get the equal nationality bill passed by Congress.

"Women think of everything else but themselves," she said. "They concern themselves with the Indians, the poor, the sick, the aged, the city, the State, the country at large, but they never sit down and think seriously about themselves or discuss their own fate."

The more Mrs. Rotter thought about woman's unselfishness and the consequent disaster awaiting women as a whole, the more worried she became, and so, as she herself expresses it, she put on her bonnet and came to Washington to see both women and Congress took some definite action about the equal rights bill.

The bill, a preliminary to the Equal Nationality Treaty of Montevideo, soon to come before the Senate for ratification, is an amendment to the Cable act of 1922, and is designed to remove all remaining discriminations against women in our nationality laws.

"This bill is very dear to my heart," Mrs. Rotter said, "for it accomplishes an important thing, in that it allows the mother as well as the father to transmit nationality to the child. The mother who bears the child, who loves it and who gives her lifetime to its training should certainly be accorded this privilege. Yet strange to say, under the United States law, she has never been, although in 13 South American countries this is not true."

"With the passage of this bill," she continued, "the last of the discriminations against women in our nationality laws will be wiped out. We are eager for the members of Congress to understand we are not trying to change the immigration laws in any way, or to change any of the present laws affecting nationality. We are only trying to make the present laws applicable to both men and women."

First Lady's Hand Shake Thrills Girl

What does a visitor to Washington look forward most eagerly to seeing?

Miss Dorothy Conrad, of Waukegan, Ill., pondered this question as she arrived here this week on a train with 150 students from the Evanston (Ill.) High School. Miss Conrad, who is connected with the Waukegan News-Sun, was awarded a trip to Washington by the Chamber of Commerce of her city. The students were making a sightseeing tour under chaperonage of their teachers.

"It seemed to me before we arrived," said Miss Conrad, "most of the visitors were interested chiefly in seeing the Capitol. But after visiting the White House I decided the biggest thrill nearly everyone experienced on the Washington trip was shaking hands with Mrs. Roosevelt."

The students and Miss Conrad were conducted by Mrs. Roosevelt through the private upper rooms of the White House.

Professor Deplores Film Stars' Accents

New York, March 29. (U.P.).—Prof. William Cabell Greet, editor of the American Journal of Speech, expressed gratification today at the "unexpected intelligence" displayed by Hollywood stars in protesting a suggestion for a speech dictator.

The professor confided he would rather hear Mae West's unadulterated Brooklynese than the "exceedingly offensive" British accent affected by many actors, actresses and radio announcers.

"Many directors and actors of the talking pictures think all actors should speak British," he said. "The result is often something that is neither fish nor fowl. The talking pictures are at their worst when the actors attempt this accent. 'Americans can't talk like the English, and they shouldn't try.'"

Saddle House.

IT WON'T BE LONG before the Gold Cupp races will be run in nearly Warrenton, Va. Then is the time when all their many Washington friends drop in on the Bill Emorys in a big way.

• • • •

What an unusual home this admiral's son has built for himself, his charming English wife and their two children! A horse's saddle was the inspiration. Bill loves horses and when he called an architect down there into the Virginia horse country, Bill told him:

"Build me a house like a saddle to span this hill."

• • • •

So the gray gabled stone dwelling picturesquely saddles a rolling hill with gorgeous view over the Gold Cup race track. In the center, two stories high, the living room is dominated by a huge stone fireplace.

• • • •

Hides of horses are the rugs. Rare oriental pieces brought from his Asiatic station by the late admiral add piquancy to the furnishings. In the "wings" of the saddle at either side of the living room are the dining room, pantry and kitchen, to the right; and the bedrooms, to the left.

Old-fashioned hospitality is the keynote of this home. Rare is the day when dropping in at the Emorys, one does not find two or three congenial spirits clustered about the fireplace or, if the sun smiles, in the most comfortable porch chairs ever experienced, clinking glasses in hand, sparkling horse talk on their tongues.

Blue-eyed, ruddy, hearty and alert, their host will run his active hands through straw-colored hair or place them akimbo on the hips of a turtle-necked jersey, and animatedly tell one gay anecdote after another of his experiences as master of the hounds.

• • •

Orchid for Kindler.

The verbal flowers were sent by none other than that older maestro at conducting—Dr. Walter Damrosch.

• • • •

The father of Orchestra Appreciation programs said:

"Did you say you were from Washington, madame?"

"Yes, sir," said the lady, gazing into the keen dark eyes beneath the awning of bushy brows.

• • • •

"My dear lady," said Dr. Damrosch, "you have a young man leading your National Symphony Orchestra who is destined to be one of the world's greatest conductors.

"Hans Kindler is a very gifted young musician and he already has shown in his work in Washington that he can—and will—go far."

Thread of Gold.

WE MISUNDERSTOOD — but she did not. A grand sport indeed, Mrs. Homer S. Cummings. We recorded here last week that her nickname was "Pinkie." Our ears, it appears, deceived us. It is "Pickie."

• • • •

The mistake was a lucky one, though, because it brought us a gay and gracious note from the lady, illustrated with a pen sketch of her own face. It was in the gifted manner of the late Marietta Minnigerode Andrews.

• • • •

Wrote Mrs. Cummings:

"Dear 'Keeping Posted:'

"Thank you for the bunch of orchids thrown at me in your Saturday column.

"Cecilia may not go well with me—but it does sound euphonious with Cummings—and the position.

"Let's call it my official name.

"Pickie—the unofficial.

"So—

"'God's in His heaven
"'All's right with the world.'"

Fine Portrait of Washington Offered for Sale to Virginia

State Lacks Funds to Make Purchase of Landsdowne Painting Now Owned by English Earl; Washington Woman Aroused Interest in It.

THE FAMOUS LANDSDOWNE painting of George Washington, now owned by the English Earl of Roseberry, recently has been offered for sale to the State of Virginia.

This was brought about through the interest of a Washington woman, Mrs. Rose Cardwell Hughes, who first saw the portrait when it was on display at the Corcoran Art Gallery during the Bicentennial celebration.

"It seemed to me almost a National disgrace," said Mrs. Hughes yesterday, "that this, the finest painting of Washington in existence, should have remained in the possession of the English for 138 years."

Feeling some patriotic American should own it, Mrs. Hughes immediately sent a cable to the Earl of Rosebery asking if the portrait was for sale. He replied that he would consent to sell it, provided an appropriate purchaser desired it. He laconically added, however, "I am not anxious to sell."

"My first thought," continued Mrs. Hughes, "was that either the National Gallery or the State of Virginia should have it. Knowing the National Gallery was not in a financial position at this time to buy such a valuable portrait, I wrote to Senator Byrd about it. He replied with gratifying enthusiasm and immediately conferred with Gov. Pollard regarding it. Gov. Pollard wrote to me, most regretfully, that owing to the current lack of State funds, he could not buy it at the time.

"Recently, learning Gov. Peery was interested in art, I wrote to him about the portrait. He replied he felt this was a portrait of Washington Virginia should have, but funds for such a purpose were not available at this time."

Gov. Peery also added, "I had a desperate fight with the Legislature to get from them an appropriation of about $1,000,000 more for schools."

The "Landsdown Washington" has as interesting a history as any portrait of the Father of our Country. It was painted by Gilbert Stuart in Philadelphia in 1796, at the request of Senator William S. Bingham of the First Continental Congress.

It has been out of England but twice, when it was loaned to this country for the centennial and the bicentennial exhibitions. It is, however, in perfect condition, according to Mrs. Hughes, and bears no signs of restoration.

Too Much Homework or No? Controversy in School System

Old-timers scoffed yesterday when it was learned a representative of the Takoma Park Home and School Association had filed a protest about the amount of home work given children with First Assistant Superintendent of Schools Stephen E. Kramer.

Modern children, they declared, were a bunch of little "softies" who thought it terrible if their home work kept them from the movies or the back-yard ball game.

Exponents of the "hard-work-never-killed-anybody school" cited the case of Abraham Lincoln. Nobody ever heard of his complaining about his home work.

But times have indeed changed. And Mr. Kramer yesterday stated he was not in favor of giving children work to do over the week-end.

"I am very much interested in this particular problem," he said. "And I hope it can be settled to the satisfaction of all. I think the difficulty often comes from a lack of clarity in the assignment, and from children's not having the proper facilities for study at home. Children should not have so much home work that they do not have sufficient time for recreation and out-door activity."

"The feeling seems to be pretty much divided about the matter," Mrs. C. D. Lowe, of the District Congress of Parent Teachers, said. "Some feel the children have too much work to do, others they do not have enough. Most of the trouble in the Junior High Schools is caused by the departmental system. A teacher will assign a lot of home work in one subject, all the other teachers do the same, and as a result the child is snowed under."

Mrs. B. M. Manley also of the District P. T. A., said she believed out-door activity to be more important to a growing child than so many lessons.

Eastern People Honor America With Ceremony

Cedars of Lebanon to Be Planted in Arlington; Good Will Gesture.

The twelve cedars of Lebanon that tomorrow will be planted in Arlington Cemetery as a gusture of goodwill to America from the people of the Near East will bring to Washington a perpetual reminder of Biblical romance and poetry.

"No tree could have been chosen that would have embodied more historic and poetic sentiment than the cedar of Lebanon," said Miss Katherine W. Reynolds, national representative of the Near East Foundation for Washington. She has visited the countries of the Near East and seen the Lebanon cedars in their natural setting.

"These trees never decay," she said, "and throughout Eastern countries they are regarded as symbols of the things that endure. Next to the giant redwoods of California they are the oldest vegetation on earth.

"In the Bible lands these trees are called 'the trees of Jehovah.' Their most famous appearance in history was when King Hiram of Tyre transplanted them to Jerusalem for the building of Solomon's Temple."

The trees will be planted near the Treasury gate on Jessup avenue to the left of MacArthur Circle. As they develop, tall, slender, majestic, they will overlook the city of Washington from across the Potomac River.

The tree-planting ceremony will be at 6 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Mrs. Roosevelt will accept the trees on behalf of the President. Barclay Acheson, executive secretary of the Near East Foundation, will speak. Girl Scouts will form an escort of honor for Mrs. Roosevelt and Boy Scouts will close the exercises with echo taps.

Modern Bathing Suits Called Lewd by Bishop

Danville, Va., March 29 (Spl.).—Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon assailed the modern feminine bathing suit in his address at Main Street Methodist Church last night, criticizing parents who "permit their daughters to wear lewd bathing suits and parade before the lecherous eyes of men."

Dr. Stannard Still Undecided On Capital Punishment Issue

Psychiatrist Thinks Time Will Come When This Science Can Determine Individual's Capacity for Good and Evil, Then Parole Work Will Be Simplified.

In the early days of the United States Government it was difficult to convince men that women were capable of holding responsible Government positions. But times have changed! This was clearly illustrated when the United States Parole Board was established four years ago; a woman was chosen to be one of the three members.

This is the eleventh in a series of articles telling of women who hold interesting positions with the Government.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

WHENEVER A PRISONER in a Federal penal institution applies for parole, he receives a visit from twinkling-eyed Dr. Amy H. Stannard, only woman member and only trained psychiatrist on the United States Parole Board.

Three times a year Dr. Stannard and the other members of the board, Arthur D. Wood and Irvin B. Tucker, visit every Federal penal institution, from the penitentiary at McNeil Island, Wash., to the Industrial Institution for Women at Alderson, W. Va. They interview all prisoners asking for parole and decide whether parole should be granted.

"We try to learn what attitude the prisoners will have toward society if we give him supervised or controlled freedom," said Dr. Stannard yesterday at her office in the Tower Building.

Personal Contact Required.

"That is something that can not be decided by reading reports and looking at charts and photographs. It requires personal contact with the man who is asking to be released. That is why we make a circuit of all the institutions three times a year."

Dr. Stannard was appointed to the parole board in 1930 by the Attorney General. Before the board was established in May of that year by an act of Congress, each prison had its own parole board.

Most persons take an extreme view of psychiatry, Dr. Stannard has found; either they expect it to work miracles, or they believe it to be a lot of foolishness.

"Those who expect it to work miracles," she said, "think a criminal is reformed if a psychiatrist merely pats him on the head and says, 'Now, my dear man, you will henceforth be a fine, upstanding citizen, with an abiding love for law and order.'

"That is ridiculous, of course," continued Dr. Stannard. "We don't pretend we can make a man over in a week. But we do believe that often we are able to start him in the right direction or—what is just as important—we learn whether he is likely to go in the right direction."

Psychiatry Will Advance.

This woman member of the parole board has visions of a time when psychiatry will be so advanced that a psychiatrist can study a person and know definitely his capacity for good and evil.

"When that time arrives the work of the parole board will be considerably less difficult," she said smilingly. And when that time arrives Dr. Stannard thinks she will be able to make up her mind about capital punishment. "If we had any certain way of knowing a person would always be a menace to society, then I believe I would be in favor of capital punishment. But since we have no way of positively determining an individual's potentiality for good or evil, I can't decide whether capital punishment is a good or a bad thing."

Dr. Stannard was in charge of the department of paroles at St. Elizabeths Hospital for three years before she received her appointment to the United States parole board. She had studied psychiatry under Dr. White at St. Elizabeths. That was after she had completed the medical course at the University of California, Berkeley.

Since there had been several pioneer women doctors in her mother's family, Amy Stannard says everyone took it rather for granted she, too, would become a doctor. When she began the medical course she planned to become a general practitioner. It was while she was taking surgery and a general internship at the county hospital in San Francisco that Dr. Stannard realized her interests were centered in psychiatry.

Discovers Her Subject.

"So I came to Washington and enrolled in Dr. White's class," she explained. She has found plenty of opportunity to apply the knowledge gained in that class. In addition to her work with the parole board, she is a member of the board of managers of the Institute of Mental Hygiene for the District of Columbia and has served on the staff of the life adjustment center, directed by the institute.

Dr. Stannard's speech retains the burr of the Middle West.

"That's because I was born in Wisconsin—at Appleton—and lived there until I was about 10 years old," she said. She also lived in Oregon and attended the State university there before entering the University of California. She enjoys being in Washington but believes she might get homesick for the West if she didn't go out there fairly often. As long as she is a member of the parole board, the prison circuit will take her West three times a year.

"I'm glad of that," said Dr. Amy Stannard.

Circus Clown Cosmetics Are Definitely Out

Bright Colors Permitted Only on Toe and Finger Nails.

Ladies on dress parade looking like clowns in a circus were not uncommon sights when "makeup" meant chalky white powder and bright red rouge.

In that age, women also wore platinum blonde and bright hennaed locks, had their eyebrows plucked in thin lines and then surveyed the result with satisfaction.

Not so Miss 1934. Beauticians have decreed she must be natural. Make-up? Of course. But she will be careful to match her powder to her skin, to blend her rouge with her natural coloring.

If you are uncertain about the shade of powder best suited to your skin, it is well to consult a beauty expert.

Beware of one thing—as the season advances and your skin becomes darkened by March winds and July suns, the powder which suited beautifully in winter will become too light. Be sure to change to a darker shade, and get rouge to blend with your tan.

As for those eyebrows, don't dare pluck them in a thin line as you did last year. Let them grow in their natural lines, and pluck the few wild hairs.

If you wear mascara, get that new and helpful cream with the petroleum base that gives lashes a soft, silky appearance and overcomes the hard finish of mascara.

As for your hair, wear it in the style most becoming to you, but don't tint it. Brushing and watchful care will give your hair a much more beautiful sheen, than can any artificial rinse.

In fact, naturalness is the keynote of this year's beauty song. But there is one exception. If you must indulge your taste for bright colors in your make-up, take it out on your finger and toe nails. Bright color is not only permissible there, it is ultra-smart.

Head of Dry Group Elucidates Purpose

Body to Change to Society for Political Action.

Washington, March 29 (AP).—Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, chairman of the Woman's National Committee of Law Enforcement, today answered the question of what will happen to that dry group whose title was based on the eighteenth amendment.

Issuing a call to its eleventh annual meeting to be held at the Dodge Hotel here on April 10, she said in a statement mailed from Orlando, Fla., the purpose was to change the group to a National society for political action.

"More than 20 States are already organized, and will urge National leadership which may be effective in the November elections," she added.

The meeting will discuss "the present situation and its remedy, which must be not merely by education but by political action."

Mrs. Peabody formerly lived in Massachusetts.

Lumber Code Quiz Expected To Be Dropped

Senator Clark, Missouri, Says Practices Have Been Explained.

(Associated Press.)

Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, said yesterday he had "about decided" not to introduce his resolution demanding a Federal Trade Commission investigation into the administration and working of the lumber code.

The Senator said the code authority had given him the information he sought and unless there were new developments the investigation would be useless.

In announcing last week that he intended to ask for the investigation, Clark indicated he believed the Code Authority was following practices similar to those which were condemned by the Trade Commission in the steel code. The Missouri Senator said he also was "anxious to know more" about the resignation of C. Arthur Bruce, of Memphis, Tenn., former executive officer of the authority, who charged "political pressure" forced him out.

Last week the Senator declared that "there is no question" but that the large lumber operators took advantage of the NRA in foisting their code on the public, saying it contained provisions which "have been fought by the Federal Government for 50 years."

In answering Clark's charges, Carl W. Bahr, secretary of the authority, said the Senator had "insisted on lower wage rates" and represented a group "seeking special favors."

U. S. Ends Case In Sea Slaying

New York, March 29 (AP).—The Federal Government today completed its case against Andrew Donaldson Kirwan, 23, accused of slaying Gillman Sessoms on the high seas.

Meanwhile it was indicated the defense would be that the victim's fatal stab wounds were self-inflicted.

Technically, the Government's case against Kirwan, son of Mme. Jean Nash Dubonnet, described as the "best dressed woman in Europe," will remain open until the trial resumes Monday, but Federal Judge Robert A. Inch said he expected the defense to open early that day.

As a climax witness to its charge that Kirwan mortally stabbed Sessoms aboard the S. S. President Garfield 600 miles off New York in a gin drinking-religious argument, the Government called Dr. Mandell Jacobi, who performed an autopsy on Sessoms' body. Dr. Jacobi expressed doubt whether Sessoms could have fallen on the knife and thus suffered fatal wounds.

Post Readers Invited on Outing Of Wander-Birds' Hiking Club

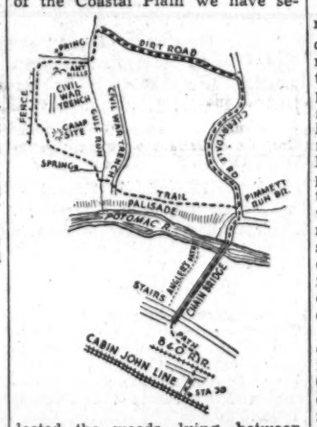
Valley of Upper Potomac Has Many Beauties to Be Visited Sunday.

Announcing organization of the Wander-birds Hiking Club, The Post invites its readers and others to participate Sunday in the first of a series of weekly tramps under direction of Robert Shosteck, trail leader for the University Hiking Club.

By Robert Shosteck.

The valley of the upper Potomac is perhaps one of the most attractive regions for the early spring hiker. The bursting greenness of spring seems to come first to this fertile wooded area.

For our hike through this part of the Coastal Plain we have selected the woods lying between Pimmett Run and Gulf Run, since this section is the most accessible from the District and since it contains numerous fortifications of historical interest. Likewise, it should be of interest to the naturalist since one may find an abundance of spring flowers, birds, and occasional small game. In the Gulf Run valley alone one can find 14 varieties of ferns and several orchids, not to mention the fascinating anthills found farther up.



We begin our hike at Station 20, on the Cabin John carline. Then down the short street to the B. and O. track, following the path over the track and down to the Chain Bridge. We cross the bridge and then cross the new concrete Pimmett Run Bridge, taking the uphill trail, starting about 100 feet on the left side beyond the end of the bridge. Many paths will tempt us to the right, but we bear close to the left, following the edge of the palisade all the way to Gulf Run, the first creek we meet.

Many Flowers Here.

Along this upper trail the hiker will find a profusion of wild flowers. In early April there will probably be found in abundance the stonecrop, arbutus, hepatica, bluet and chickweed. A little later the spring beauty, bloodroot and wild geranium will abound.

We turn up Gulf Run, crossing to the left bank, and follow the trail but a few hundred feet until we reach a tiny rivulet which drains a spring. Taking the trail going obliquely to the left uphill, we reach a camp site and then bear to our left along a trail which leads to the fence of an old estate. Hidden in dense brush on our right are stone breastworks erected during the Civil War as a defense of the approach to Washington. Here occasional cannonballs and iron fragments of guns have been found. We follow the path along the fence until the first valley on our right, here taking the trail down.

If we can afford a detour on the hillside on our right we shall find a series of anthills, some of them 2 feet high and 4 feet in diameter. These are honeycombed with passages and chambers, and each is inhabited by many thousands of ants. Beyond the anthills are remnants of an old Civil War estate—some old climbing roses, lilac bushes and periwinkle. One can barely discern the foundations of the mansion which once stood there.

Back Toward Chain Bridge.

Returning to our trail, we soon reached Gulf Run once more. We cross and after a short walk up the run, reach a barely visible road on the right—little more than two parallel tracks overgrown with grass. Along this road the watchful hiker may find the pansy violet, the most beautiful of our native violets. Later in the spring jack in the pulpit will be particularly abundant in the valley along the road. In the woods along this road rabbits, squirrels and mice may occasionally be seen; in fact, the writer has on occasion caught a young bunny in a fair chase through the brush. Of course, the bunny gained his freedom after a brief interview.

Continuing along the road we eventually reach the Cherrydale road which we follow down to Chain Bridge. The entire trip, including detours, should not take more than two hours, so if the hiker wishes to do an additional 3 miles, a walk back to Georgetown along the towpath is suggested. A stairway from the bridge at the point where the bridge goes over the canal makes the towpath easily accessible.

(This hike will be conducted Sunday, starting at 11 a. m. from Station 20 (Chain Bridge Station) on the Cabin John or Potomac Heights car line. Bring lunch, and canteen if you have one.)

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Blackie Heads for Home

BLACKIE ran mighty fast that night when Uncle Joe shot at him, and he ran pretty fast that day when Sallie Cat was riding on his nose; but I don't believe he ever ran as fast as he did when he broke away from those circus folks. Every time he thought about that man walking about the circus, with a bearskin overcoat on, and the other bears with rings in their noses and men poking them with sharp sticks, he would jump a little higher and farther. The fact is he was running just about as fast as Jay Bird could fly, and Jay Bird can fly pretty fast.

It was hard to run in the woods where there were so many trees and bushes and briars, and so after a while Blackie stopped and asked Jay Bird to fly out to the road and see if any of the circus folks were in sight, and if they were not he would go out to the road where he could run better. While Jay Bird was gone to the road, Blackie lay down and rested, for he had been running so fast that he was pretty hot and tired.

After a while Jay Bird came back and told Blackie that he had been out to the road, and there wasn't a soul in sight, and there wasn't a house in miles of them. Then Blackie went out to the road, but he was mighty afraid of meeting Mr. Man, Uncle Joe or somebody else who was going to or from the circus, so he asked Jay Bird to fly along ahead, and if he saw anybody on the road to come back and tell him.

Escapes Uncle Joe's Gun.

Jay Bird flew on ahead, and mighty high up in the air so he could see a long way up and down the road, and Blackie followed as fast as he could run. It was lots easier to run in the road than in the woods, and so Blackie got along mighty well; but after a while he felt so tired and hot and hungry that he wished Jay Bird would stop and let him catch up with him, and they could both rest. About that time he heard Jay Bird hollering, "Jay, jay, jay," as loud as he could, and when he looked up he saw Jay Bird flying as if a hawk had been after him. "Take to the woods, quick," called Jay Bird, and he flew right out over the tops of the trees.

Jay Bird kept on flying for ever so long, but after a while he came to a nice little pond of water, and he came down and got a drink and waited for Blackie to catch up. When Blackie got there he was most out of breath, but he had enough left to ask Jay what in the world it was that he saw up the road that scared him so. "It didn't scare me," said Jay Bird, "but it did look dangerous for a big bear that had been eating Uncle Joe's chickens, for it was that same Uncle Joe that was coming down the road, and he had his gun."

Fish Supper.

"That's twice that you have saved my life today, Jay Bird, and you certainly are a good old scout. I don't see how I would ever get along in these woods without you. Now, let's get a good drink of water and then rest a while. And I think I will take a little swim, too, and wash some of this dust and perspiration off of me." Blackie jumped into the water and swam around for a while, and then dived down and stayed so long that Jay Bird was afraid he was drowned. But after a little while he came up, and he had a fish that was about as big as he could hold in his mouth. "Right here is where we will spend the night, Jay Bird," said Blackie, "and, besides having a mighty good supper and breakfast, we will have a good true fish story to tell Dr. Coon and the other fellows when we get home." You remember that Blackie always carries matches in a tiny tin box which he keeps in his ear, and the water won't hurt them a bit. So they soon had the fish broiling in the coals, and they certainly did enjoy that supper a lot more than Blackie did the one the night before in the cage of the circus folks. After supper they sat around the fire and talked about the circus, and Blackie told Jay Bird that he certainly would believe him the next time he told him there were white bears or blue bears or any other sort of bears. They were both pretty tired and sleepy, and so Jay Bird helped Blackie to scratch up a good bed of leaves and straw, and then he flew up in a tree, and he and Blackie were soon fast asleep.

They certainly did enjoy that supper more than Blackie did the one the night before.

Pay Bill Hits D. C. Library, School Plans

Budget Surplus Reduced $1,950,000, House Committee Told.

Anacostia and Jefferson Projects Will Suffer From Measure.

Enactment of the independent offices appropriations bill, while bringing joy to thousands of Government employes because of the 5-and-5 pay restoration amendment, has probably blocked school and library construction projects by reducing the anticipated District surplus $1,950,000.

Figures compiled yesterday for the House District Appropriations sub-committee showed that instead of $5,000,000, the District government will have a surplus of only about $3,000,000, not counting revenue from liquor taxes, at the end of the fiscal year 1935.

As there is now $4,000,000 in supplemental estimates before the Budget Bureau, it is obvious that they all can not be forwarded to Congress even if the budget director approved them.

Cost Is $1,950,000.

The cost to the District government of the pay restoration will be $500,000 from February 1 to June 30, this year, and $1,200,000 for the next fiscal year. In addition, automatic promotion provided in another amendment will cost about $250,000.

In former years the District was expected to maintain a surplus of $3,000,000, but this policy was discarded during the depression as expenditures gradually ate away the savings.

It was learned yesterday that Rufus Lusk, executive secretary of the Washington Taxpayers Protective Association, will carry his fight against addition of supplemental items to the present budget of nearly $36,000,000 to the Budget Bureau. He has already written the District sub-committee opposing any increase in the budget and favoring a reduction in realty taxes.

Relief Items Pushed.

The major item in the supplemental estimates, and the one District Commissioners are pushing most vigorously, is the additional $2,700,000 for emergency relief aid in 1935.

The school items which are likely to be disapproved are for completion of the appropriation for the Anacostia Junior High School and completion of the appropriation for the purchase of a site in the southwest for the Jefferson Junior High School.

Field Studied To Fill Wilson Welfare Post

Allen and Committee to Confer Next Week on Candidates.

The new director of the Board of Public Welfare, to succeed George S. Wilson, who has applied for retirement, is expected to be considered at a conference next week between Commissioner George E. Allen and a committee of the board which is surveying the field of candidates.

There are about a dozen applicants for the position and a number of others, who have not applied, are being considered by the committee because of their special qualifications. Under the law, the director is recommended by the board, subject to approval by the Commissioners.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West is drafting legislation in accord with Commissioner Allen's plan to make the director of the Welfare Board responsible directly to the Commissioners. Under the present law, he is responsible to the Welfare Board.

The committee which is studying the qualifications of the candidates is composed of W. W. Millan, chairman of the board; and Sidney F. Taliaferro and Frederick W. McReynolds. Among those who have been suggested for the post are William Hodson, director of emergency relief for New York City; Ellwood Street, director of the Community Chest; W. Frank Parsons, director of the Federal Reemployment Service; Roberts Lansdale and Aubrey Williams, of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, and Katherine Lenroot, assistant chief of the U. S. Children's Bureau.

Brazilian Ship Shows Effects of Collision

Baltimore, March 29 (AP).—The Brazilian steamship Mandu limped into port here today after her collision with the oil tanker Garnet Hulings off the Virginia capes yesterday. A scar, 25-feet long, 10 feet above the water line, showed where the tanker had struck her in the heavy fog.

Speaking through an interpreter, Capt. J. F. Magame described the crash and told how lucky the ships were that there was not more damage.

Baltimore and D. C. Spellers To Vie in Battle of Syllables

Vowel, Diphthong Teams Will Clash to Win Alphabet Cup.

Baltimore, March 29 (Spl.).—Word jugglers of the Waverly Spelling Club, of Baltimore, started spring training today in preparation for their annual "battle of the syllables" with the Capital Spelling Club of Washington.

The Baltimore spellers are grimly determined to win back the silver cup for spelling proficiency, which the Washingtonians took home with them last fall. Their defeat by the District of Columbia team still rankles.

According to present plans, the spelling bee which will determine possession of the cup will be held on April 13 at the Waverly M. E. Church, home grounds of the Baltimore spellers. The Baltimoreans will be led by their captain, S. T. Walker, veteran speller and an expert croquet player.

Last fall, the Washingtonians won by spelling a simple little word like "censer." The judges had been tossing around words like "hurry," "tahr," "taille," and "goauche," and the Waverly vowel and diphthong experts had met and conquered them bravely. But "censer" stopped them, and Washington won.

On April 13, about 18 spellers will line up on either side for the fray. The Washington judges are yet to be picked.

Washington Channel Bill To Be Pushed

House Group Decides to Introduce Plan Hit by Roosevelt.

Measure Provides for $154,000,000 River, Harbors Work.

Over the opposition of President Roosevelt, the House Rivers and Harbors Committee yesterday decided to introduce a bill comprising projects totaling $154,000,000 and including the proposed improvement of the Washington Channel.

While it is freely admitted by the committee that the bill has scant chance of passing even the House at this session, political pressure induced the committee to introduce a bill and file a favorable report, although the President had asked that no such action be taken because of a comprehensive survey of natural resources he is directing.

The bill will be introduced and probably reported favorably early next week. It includes the major projects proposed and considered at extensive hearings held during the last three months.

Channel Project.

The Washington Channel project is included as recommended by the board of engineers for rivers and harbors of the War Department and provides for an equal division of the estimated $1,650,000 cost, or $825,000 by the District government and $825,000 by the Federal Government.

This division of cost is contrary to the wishes of the District Commissioners and the recommendation of Maj. J. D. Arthur, jr., United States engineer for this district, who suggested that cost to the District be only $389,000.

During the hearing held by the committee about six weeks ago Maj. Paul A. Hodgson, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, said that if this amount were increased the District Commissioners would oppose enactment of the bill.

Improvements Planned.

The plan for improving the Washington Channel on the north side includes the construction of a yacht harbor in four sections, with berthing space for 286 boats, above the War College grounds.

Below this would be a harbor master wharf for the joint use of the harbor police and the harbor fire department, and a new workhouse pier unless District authorities decide to build it on the Anacostia River.

Three new commercial piers would be constructed. One would be for the Norfolk & Washington boat line, one for local excursion boats and one for miscellaneous use.

The plans provide for the eventual widening of Water street to 160 feet, and for a future park bridge at the head of the channel, but these projects are not authorized in the present bill.

Revenue from the wharfs would amount to $36,500 a year, according to estimates made by the District engineer.

The committee also accepted the recommendation of the Board of Engineers that jurisdiction of the entire water front above the War College grounds should be vested in the District and that the proposed wharfs, including construction and maintenance, should be under the District Commissioners.

One time he helped to arrest his own brother accused of participation in an attempt to hijack liquor from a Japanese ship. A member of the crew was killed in a gun fight.

Police Lieutenant Exonerated At Assault Charge Hearing

Plaintiffs and defendants in an assault case. Upper—Mrs. Elsie Jardine and her son, George Smith, who charged they were beaten at the hands of Capitol Police Lieut. Alfred Wilmott. Below—Lieut. Wilmott, who was acquitted of the charge in Police Court yesterday.

Character Witnesses Aid Release of Capitol Officer.

Prominent character witnesses figured yesterday in the exoneration of Lieut. Alfred Wilmott, Capitol police, after a hearing on assault charges before Police Judge Isaac R. Hitt.

The prosecution interpreted as a "moral victory," however, the comment of Judge Hitt in passing on the case. He declared:

"The officer may have been under the influence of liquor. If he was he has paid the penalty. The forfeiture took care of that."

Lawyers explained Wilmott forfeited collateral when charged with drunkenness and disorderly conduct in connection with the incident.

Judge Hitt added he believed Wilmott accidentally struck the complainent, Mrs. Elsie Jardine, 39, of 119 C street northeast, early on March 18. The jurist added the woman apparently walked too close while the police lieutenant was removing to his office her son by a former marriage, George Smith, 23.

Among the character witnesses for the defendant were Representative Raymond J. Cannon, Wisconsin; Charles W. Jurney, Senate sergeant at arms; James Dunn, custodian, Senate Office Building; Police Inspector Albert J. Headley and William S. Orthman, Capitol police chief.

Woman Near Hysteria.

Bordering on hysteria, Mrs. Jardine was the first to testify. Under direct questioning of Prosecutor Louis Whitestone, she charged Wilmott "struck me with his first." She declared she was clad only in her nightgown and a fur coat.

"I was in bed listening to the radio," the woman testified. "My son, George Smith, had just gone out. Later I heard loud talking on the street, and fearing George was in trouble, hurried to investigate. I found Lieut. Wilmott holding my son by the wrist."

When she interfered, Mrs. Jardine said, Wilmott cursed her. Her son broke loose and started to walk away, she declared, but the policeman ordered him to stop, "or I'll shoot you dead in your tracks!"

Wilmott then grabbed both mother and son, it was testified, and ordered them to "march." He threatened to "fill us full of lead," Mrs. Jardine said. She told the court that Wilmott was in plain clothes.

Son Takes Stand.

Mrs. Jardine described the incident as "the most terrible thing I have ever gone through." She charged that Wilmott was intoxicated.

Smith followed his mother on the stand. He said that when he left his home he saw Wilmott attempting to put two other men into a taxi. The policeman, he said, asked where he was going.

"I replied 'what's it to you,'" Smith declared, "and then he grabbed me by the arm and said he wanted to take me to his office. My mother came up then and she was knocked down in a scuffle which followed."

Smith also testified that Wilmott threatened to "shoot us down."

Policeman Robert Howell said that Wilmott was "so drunk he apparently did not know where he was." A fellow officer, Carl Hestikind, testified that Wilmott "talked all right and said he was attempting to arrest the others for snooping around the Capitol Grounds."

Wilmott Describes Affair.

Wilmott, 25-year-old freshman law student at Columbus University, and son of a Milwaukee court official, admitted drinking "a bottle of beer and two glasses of punch," but denied he was intoxicated.

He said he was walking near the Senate Office Building when his attention was attracted by two "drunken men." Recent thefts from Senators' offices prompted him to question the men, he declared.

While they talked, Wilmott said, Smith was seen to leave an archway of the Senate Office Building and the scuffle ensued. Mrs. Jardine, he declared, ran screaming down the street and jumped on his back. When he turned around she was thrown to the street, he said.

Meanwhile, a $15,000 damage suit, filed against Wilmott by Mrs. Jardine, is pending in District Supreme Court.

'Itsick,' Bank Robber, Put On Probation

Levin Is Indicted for Attempt at Mechanics Main Office.

Isador Weiman, confessed member of the gang which robbed the Washington Mechanics Bank branch at Eighth and G streets southeast, was placed on probation yesterday by Justice Peyton Gordon in District Supreme Court.

At the same time, the District Grand Jury returned an indictment against Louis Levin, alias Lou Callahan, for attempted robbery of the bank's main office at 3401 Connecticut avenue. This robbery was frustrated by tear gas.

Weiman, whose alias the grand jury reported was "Bad Itsick," surrendered voluntarily when he learned that he had been indicted for robbery.

Later, he entered a plea of guilty. These facts, together with the further fact that he had no previous jail record, led Justice Gordon to place him on probation for a period from two to five years.

The indictment to which Weiman pleaded guilty accused him and three others of robbing the bank of $2,453 on April 6, 1933. According to witnesses, he acted as "lookout" for the other bandits.

The other three, indicted jointly with Weiman, are in difficulties in States where their activities were interrupted. They are Louis Edward Wagner, John Joseph Barr and John Carroll.

The specific charge in the indictment against Levin in the other attempted robbery was housebreaking and assault with intent to commit robbery. He was alleged to have been identified by persons who saw him run from the bank.

Police say that Levin and an unnamed companion entered the bank on October 21, 1932, with drawn guns. They shouted a command, "Stick 'em up," but instead, William T. Matthews, a teller, stepped on the tear gas release. The bandits fired one shot and ran from the bank. They obtained no money.

One hundred and fifty projects to cost $5,455,000 already have been placed under contract, the bureau said. The report said projects costing $286,000 had been completed under the program.

Cronin Stresses Finer Points of Defense in Nats' Two-Hour Drill

Neusel Fights Loughran On May 4

Will Be in Line for Shot at Championship if He Beats Foe.

Steve Hamas May Prove Snag, However, in Garden Build-up.

By Stuart Cameron.

NEW YORK, March 29 (U.P.).—Madison Square Garden looked far ahead today to arrange for a challenger for whoever happens to be world's heavyweight champion after Primo Carnera and Maxie Baer have had their disagreement.

The Garden folks hope the challenger will be Walter Neusel, the free-swinging German blond. They've matched him with Tommy Loughran, recent victim of Carnera's ponderous paws. The fight will be in the Garden May 4, and will be, as Joe Humphries likes to say, of "ten rounds or less."

Some See Knockout.

If Neusel can get by Loughran—and there are plenty of smart ones who think Walter will win by a knockout—the German would be in line for a championship shot.

Lots of leather will be thrown before Neusel does get a chance at the championship, but he'd make a good fight, either way. If he were to go in against Carnera the fans would come out to see a round-house slugger trying to hang one on Primo's highly unpopular chin. If Baer wins the title and meets up with Neusel, the fans would have the opportunity of witnessing two earnest sluggers in action at one and the same time.

Subject for Debates.

The Loughran-Neusel fight itself will be an elegant conversational topic for the next couple of fortnights. The debates, of course, will be as to who is going to beat whom, and there are plenty of arguments on either side. The Neusels will insist that Walter will knock Tommy's ears off within five rounds at the most.

The Loughrans will point out that Carnera, heavyweight champion of all the world, couldn't do this although he had 15 rounds in which to try. They will further remark that only by the grace of a singularly inept decision is Neusel still to be rated among the first flight, this same, of course, being the one which gave Walter the nod over Chicago's No. 1 heavyweight, Kingfish Levinsky. The writer takes the view that Neusel's chances of laying Tommy away are distinctly rosy, although admitting the Neusel-Levinsky verdict was questionable.

Hamas May Be Snag.

A snag in the foregoing program may be met in the person of Steve Hamas, former Pennsylvania collegian, who is being urged as a contender by his manager, the veteran Charley Harvey. But Stevie has been playing tag with the boys and Charley is trying to keep him out of sight until the Carnera-Baer thing is over.

Hamas moved into the front row of "possibles" by trouncing the fading former champion, Max Schmeling. This was his best fight, and Charley wants the memory of it kept alive and not marred by a possible unhappy showing against some other candidate for a title shot.

There is, then, the possibility that Neusel, if he beats Tommy, would be pitted against Hamas, with that winner becoming the most worthy contender.

Maranville Out Of Hospital Soon

Doctors Feel He Can Use Crutches in 2 Weeks.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 29 (AP). Walter (Rabbit) Maranville, the veteran second baseman of the Boston Braves whose left leg was broken in a collision at home plate in an exhibition game here yesterday, will be out of the hospital and on crutches within the next two weeks, in the opinion of attending physicians.

Dr. Prescott Leureton, noted bone specialist at the American Legion Crippled Children's Hospital here, who assisted other St. Petersburg doctors in setting the leg, said that unless complications set in, the player would be able to walk within 7 or 8 weeks.

Slab Shortage Faces Tigers For 1934

HAMPDEN SIDNEY, Va., March 29 (AP).—A first baseman, a shortstop and a leftfielder may do much of the pitching for "Yank" Bernier's Hampden Sidney Tigers who are eager to take up where they left off last year at the close of a phenomenal season.

Bernier, always resourceful, has transferred the lads with good arms to the mound, but this step has cost him a couple of glaring holes in the infield.

One Veteran Hurler.

Birch Douglass, of Kinston, N. C., a southpaw and the only veteran pitcher on hand, had Eddie Mann, Sam Ogden and Maynard Berryman to help him last year. Mann and Ogden failed to return to school and Berryman graduated.

And so Coach Bernier has decided to try Doval Ogden, a first baseman, in the box, letting him pitch to his twin brother, Dallas. They'll be the only "twin battery" in the State.

Harold White, a sophomore, who showed a good fast ball and a nice variety of hooks but who lacked control last season, may come through.

Bill Moore at Third.

Capt. Bill Moore will be stationed at third base. Bernier will need to develop players for shortstop, second base and first. Freshmen can be used in most of the scheduled games and a number of newcomers may make the grade.

The schedule:

April 2, Washington and Lee, here; 5, University Club, Princeton, here; 6, Delaware College, here; 7, Delaware College, here; 9, Bridgewater College, Bridgewater; 10, Bridgewater College, Bridgewater; 14, Medical College, here; 20, Randolph-Macon, here; 21, Randolph-Macon, here; 24, Bridgewater, here; 25, Bridgewater, here; 27, Elon College, Elon, N. C.; 28, Wake Forest, Wake Forest, N. C.

May 1, Wake Forest, here; 3, Medical College, Richmond; 4, Randolph-Macon, Ashland; 5, Randolph-Macon, Ashland; 7, Washington College, Chestertown, Md.; 8, Haverford College, Philadelphia; 9, Delaware, Newark, Del.; 12, Richmond, here; 15, Richmond, Richmond.

Sir Thomas Fast In Derby Workout

Runs Mile at 1:42 2-5, Ends With 2:10 2-5.

Louisville, Ky., March 29 (U.P.).—Alexander Gordon's Sir Thomas, joint favorite with Charles Fisher's Mata Hari in the futures betting on the forthcoming Kentucky Derby, worked the fastest mile of any of the Derby candidates to date when he covered that distance in 1:42 2-5 at Douglas Park today.

With 130 pounds up—4 pounds more than he will carry in the 1¼ miles pageant on May 5—the big brown son of Sir Gallahad III—Breathing Spell finished out the full Derby distance in the creditable time of 2:10 2-5. Although obviously tired at the end of his trial, the colt was eased up at the end. He cooled out quickly and appears ready to go to the races in competition on short notice.

It is expected the odds on Sir Thomas will shorten as a result of today's workout.

Two Capital Students Receive Rifle Ratings

Albany Rookies Reach Camp at Martinsville

Martinsville, Va., March 29 (Spl.).—J. P. Whalen, with 20 rookies who hope to "make the big-time circuit," reached here yesterday to spend the next three weeks in basket ball practice. They are material for the Albany team in the International League.

The first practice game will be played on Monday at Fieldale against the Reidsville, N. C., team.

Picard Routs Jinx, Wins With 283

Horton Smith, Cooper, Dunlap Tied for 2d, 3 Shots Behind.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 29 (AP).—Henry Pickard, young Charleston (S. C.) professional, finally overcame his Pinehurst jinx today and won the thirty-second North and South Open golf tournament with a 72-hole total of 283.

Twice before the slender Southerner had been out in front in this annual fixture, only to falter in the closing rounds, but today he met the challenge and beat out Horton Smith, Harry Cooper and George T. Dunlap, jr., in a hot battle down the stretch. They were tied for second at 286.

This was the first major victory for the 27-year-old Carolinian who has been playing tournament golf for only a few years. Picard shot a 69 in the first round and came back with a brilliant 68 in the second. He jumped to 74 this morning, but still managed to hold a stroke advantage and covered the last round in 72.

Cooper Cards a 69.

Smith and Dunlap, National amateur champion, drew to within a stroke of Picard after the third round, but both had 74s this afternoon. Six shots away after 54 holes, Cooper shot a 69, the best score of the last round, to pull into a three-way tie.

Bill Mehlhorn, who led after the first round with a 67, built a closing 72 today for a total of 288, while Tommy Armour, Wiffy Cox, Johnny Kinder and Mortie Dutra were together at 289.

A 73—75 for today's rounds threw Armour out of the fight for first place. Cox, who slipped to a 78 this morning, came home with a 69 to equal Cooper's mark, while Dutra could do no better than a pair of 75s.

Perkins, Revolta Tied.

Phil Perkins, who shot a 70, 1 under par, on the last round, and John Revolta, who used 76 blows, were together at 290. Mike Turnesa and Al Watrous had 291. Willie Macfarlane and Tom Creavy had 293, while Paul Runyan, Jimmy Hines and Denny Shute were grouped at 294. Bill Burke was back at 295, Walter Hagen had 296 and MacDonald Smith 297.

Picard's victory brought him $1,000. Tomorrow the professionals move on to Virginia Beach for the Cavalier, open.

Yankees Given 3 Hits; Braves Win, 7-2

Betts and Mangum Check Sluggers; Giants Score by Rally, 5 to 4.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 29 (AP).—"Huck" Betts and Leo Mangum combined to hold the New York Yankees to three hits today as the Boston Braves pounded out a 7-to-2 decision in the final game of the series between the two clubs. Although defeated, the Yanks won the exhibition series 4 games to 3 with one contest a draw.

Giants Rally in Ninth.

Orlando, Fla., March 29 (AP).—The New York Giants came from behind in the ninth inning today to beat out their interborough rivals, the Brooklyn Dodgers, 5 to 4, in the final exhibition game between the two teams.

The five innings Van Mungo hurled for the Dodgers the world champions were completely humbled, getting only one hit. Owen Carroll, his successor, survived the sixth, but in the seventh the Giants broke loose with a three-run attack before Phil Page, West Coast recruit, halted the rally.

Reds Given Day Off.

Tampa, Fla., March 29 (U.P.).—The Cincinnati Reds, leaders of the Grapefruit League, had a day off today and most of the players either golfed or fished.

Meanwhile Manager Bob O'Farrell announced he would pitch Benny Frey and Al Hollingsworth against Rochester at Barton tomorrow, and start "Dazzy" Vance against Columbus at Avon Park Saturday.

Again Beat Tigers.

Fort Myers, Fla., March 29 (AP).—A first-inning jump and persistence at bat sent the Philadelphia Athletics to their second training camp win over Mickey Cochrane's Detroit Tigers today. The score was 5 to 3.

On two hits and an outfield fly, the A's picked up a pair of runs in the first, and added one each in the fourth, fifth and seventh. Vernon Kennedy and Harry Maturzak, two of Connie Mack's new twirlers from Oklahoma, had the Tigers well in hand throughout.

Red Sox Help Phils Win.

Winter Haven, Fla., March 29 (AP). The Phillies were virtually handed a 6-to-5 victory over the Boston Red Sox today by the generosity of George Pipgras, rival pitcher.

American League Due to Steal National's Close-Race Thunder

At Least Three Clubs, Yanks, Tigers and Red Sox, Prove Real Preseason Menace to Nats, With Others Teams Likewise Strengthened.

NEW YORK, March 29 (AP).—Take one swift look down the American League roll for 1934, and for the first time in years you see balanced competition and the promise of a knock-down, drag-out pennant scramble of the kind usually featured by the National League.

At least three clubs—Yankees, Tigers and Red Sox—have risen to menace the disillusioned champions, the Washington Nationals, even though Connie Mack's Athletics had to be wrecked to provide the power base of two of them.

There is even hope for the rising White Sox, another beneficiary of the financial straits the Athletics found themselves in after making a two-horse race of it with the Yankees from 1926 down through 1932. The Browns, in St. Louis, have added strength and the impetus of old Rajah Hornsby's inspired leadership. The Indians, under Walter Johnson, move back to their own tight little ball park after a year of discouraging experiences in the wide stretches of the huge Cleveland Municipal Stadium.

Foxx Is Athletics' Star.

At every turn but Philadelphia, where Jimmy Foxx alone remains as a star of the champions of 1929, 1930 and 1931, there is fresh hope, new vigor and strength. The mighty Bob Grove, Mickey Cochrane, Rube Walberg, George Earnshaw and Max Bishop have joined Al Simmons, Jimmy Dykes and Mule Haas elsewhere, leaving the new edition of the Athletics a strong contender for eighth place.

The Nats are standing pat with the veterans of 1933 except for one outfield post where Jonathan Stone joins Heinie Manush and Fred Schulte in the outer works, replacing the hook-nosed slugger, "Goose" Goslin, traded to the Tigers.

With George Herman Ruth, now a neat 41, acting half his age this spring, the Yanks command the most serious attention. Any kind of improved pitching from "Red" Ruffing and Lefty Gomez, along with the aid of Johnny Allen, Russ Van Atta, and Danny Macfayden, who must be better than he looked last season, will boom the Yank's chances. Red Rolfe is a hitting find at shortstop and he teams with Don Heffner at second as Mark Koenig and Tony Lazzeri did when they broke in in 1926.

Lazzeri will play third or fill in at second if Heffner fails. Belting Lou Gehrig looks to be in for one of his biggest years. Refurnished from top to bottom with Tom Yawkeys millions, with a new manager in Stanley (Bucky) Harris and the great Grove heading a sound, multi-lefthanded pitching staff, the Red Sox may land anywhere. The infield is a gamble, but Rick Ferrel, behind the plate, Dusty Cook, Roy Johnson and Carl Reynolds in the outfield, provide capable balance.

The White Sox added strength comes chiefly from the purchase of Earnshaw from the A's, Ed Durham from the Red Sox, and Whitlow Wyatt, formerly of the Tigers, sturdy, hard working hurlers. Big Zeke Bonura adds hitting power at first base. Home plate in the White Sox park has been moved out 14 feet to give Al Simmons, still one of baseball's great clouters, a chance to hit more home runs.

Hornsby May Play.

The Browns have fair pitching, a gap at third base Hornsby himself may finally fill, a shortstop find in Alan Strange, the second best defense in the league, and plenty of timely, if not overpowering hitters.

Cleveland, despite such belters as Averill, Porter, Hale and Vosmik, a fine pitching staff headed by Hudlin, Pearson, Harder and Hildebrand, has infield trouble to offset the psychological advantage of the return to smaller, more familiar pastures.

Mickey Cochrane not only has electrified the Tigers with his aggressive spirit but has brought to Detroit the best catching in the league. He has lost Schoolboy Rowe, last year's early sensation, but has found another in "Salty" Parker, a kid shortstop, who only needs to learn to hit a little. The Tiger pitching is strong and Cochrane will personally help Hank Greenberg, Charley Gehringer, Goslin and Bill Rogell take care of the hitting.

Covelli Fights Von Reedon at Portner's

Pair Listed in 10-Rounder Tuesday; Davis to Meet Gross in Semifinal.

CHARLIE VON REEDON and Frankie Covelli have been signed for the ten-round main event at Portner's Arena Tuesday. Von Reedon, a combination boxer-puncher recently transplanted from Florida soil, has turned in several very good fights hereabouts. Covelli is best remembered for taking a decision from Pete Sarron in his first local appearance.

Roddy Davis, local lightweight hope, returns to the wars against Mike Gross in a six-round semifinal. Dominic Nice, of Brooklyn, meets Tony Galiano, of Baltimore, in another six.

Howell vs. Carrier.

Three fours are carded. In possibly the best of them, Wild Bill Howell tackles Stanford Carrier, who made an auspicious debut as a professional last week by scoring a quick knockout over Frank Bobbitt, of Roanoke. Little Montana swaps punches with Nick Transparente in another four and Al Dintaman will exchange with Joe Transparente in the opener.

Gordon Players Report.

Candidates for the Gordon's Cafeteria baseball team will report at the Albee Building Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock for the first practice session of the season. Unlimited teams desiring games may make arrangements with John Alden, West 1444, after 7 p. m.

Post Time Set For 1 P. M. At Bowie

26 Features Arranged for 12-Day Meet Which Opens Monday.

JOSEPH B. BOYLE, general manager of the Southern Maryland Association, which opens the Eastern racing season Easter Monday, has set the post time for the first race at 1 p. m.

With an all-star card of seven races, headed by the $2,000 Inaugural on tap, Boyle is confident of playing host to 20,000 Eastern turfites, that is, if the day is clear.

Race specials will be run from New York, Philadelphia, Wilmington, Chester, Havre de Grace, Baltimore and Washington. In addition, the intercity electric line plying between Washington and Baltimore will operate on half-hour schedule, with stops at the foot of the grandstand. However, motorists will find excellent roads leading there, with free parking space on track property for 10,000 cars, which in all likelihood will be the mode of travel.

26 Feature Races.

The book for the meeting released by Race Secretary Charles McLennan shows that there will be 26 features run during the 12 days sport.

The outstanding events are the $2,000 Inaugural, $3,500 Bowie Memorial, $2,000 Bowie Kindergarten and $5,000 Southern Maryland Handicap, nominations for which closed Wednesday.

There will be 41 sprint races run next month. Twelve will be at 4 furlongs, six at 5½ furlongs and 23 at 6 furlongs. Distance runners will be able to compete in 43 races, which have been divided as follows: Seventeen at 1 mile and 70 yards, 19 at 1 1-16 miles, and 7 at 1⅛ miles.

Jesse Bennet, custodian of the jockeys' room, gives out the information that such well-known knights of the pigskin as Earl Porter, Sonny Workman, Alfred Robertson, Mack Garner, E. Litzenberger, Lee Humphries, Silvio Coucci, Johnny Gilbert, Allen Tipton and Duke Bellizzi will be on hand to accept mounts throughout the meeting.

Pari-Mutuels Test.

The pari-mutuel crew under the direction of Mortimer M. Mahoney will be given a test today so that they can start giving 100 per cent service from the outset.

Mahoney, in an effort to give satisfaction to the fans, has informed his employes that any one caught wagering behind the machines will be immediately discharged. The rule worked with success at Miami and Mahoney intends to adopt it at all tracks where he is in charge of the "iron men."

Supt. Dick Pending reports close to 1,000 horses on the grounds and is confident every stall will have an occupant by the time racing begins at 1 p. m. Monday.

The racing strip is in excellent condition and horsemen who have been working their charges over it predict a new track record or two before the meeting ends.

Harpertown to Have Baseball Team in '34

Elkins, W. Va., March 29 (Spl.).—Although but a hamlet, Harpertown, near here, home of several "big-time" baseball players, including Del Gainer, who played in big-league teams for years, will put a team of its own into the field this season.

Baseball fans of the section will back the team, which will include a number of players who have played with Elkins and other independent teams of the valley region. The manager will be Glen Gainer, who managed the Junior Moose team in the Tygarts Valley League last season. Marion Hart is president and Howard Gainer secretary-treasurer.

Pilot Counts On Cut-Off Play Saving Lot of Grief in 1934.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

BILOXI, Miss., March 29.—Pro Joe Cronin held a laboratory class for his Washington Ball Club today when it resumed the serious business of preparing for the pennant campaign as contrasted with the last two days of tomfoolery against the Cleveland Indians in New Orleans in exhibition games which, like all exhibition games, are merely exhibition games.

Today, Prof. Cronin elaborated on the science of baseball in a two-hour session in which he had his boys dabbling in the finer points of defensive play that are lost upon the lay fan in the heat of combat, but which are freighted with the difference between victory and defeat if properly executed.

To the veterans, it was the old rigamarole, this business of practicing the "cut-off" plays to keep that tying or winning run off second base, but lest they become rusty in this phase of inside baseball, Cronin commanded strict attention from every man who might handle the ball for Washington some time this season.

Mid-Season Style.

Prof. Cronin had 'em out there whipping the ball around in a style that smacked of mid-season, the infielders intercepting the throws from the outfield at the proper moment and lashing the ball to the proper bases.

Lest there be some among us who aren't quite familiar with Cronin's style of cut-off plays that enabled the Nats to perform with such eclat last season, I give you his own ideas on the subject:

"The cut-off play is as old as baseball itself, but the team that can get it down pat will save itself a lot of grief during the course of the season. The big idea, of course, is to keep that winning or tying run off second base when the ball is hit to the outfield.

"Of course, we don't bother about the cut-off play unless the game is close. But if the score is tied, or we are a run or two ahead, the game can be lost or won, depending on how the ball is handled on an outfield hit. We play the percentages when we let a run score from third and try to keep the winning and tying run off second. It's even good baseball to let the tying run score from second or third and hold the winning run on first.

"But last year our infielders made very few mistakes about handling those throws from the outfield. Joe Kuhel, Ossie Bluege, Luke Sewell and even the pitchers show great judgment in intercepting the throws and whipping the ball to Buddy Myer or myself at second to keep the runner who hit the ball from taking an extra base where he would be in scoring position.

"Of course, if it's the winning run that's trying to score from second or third, we've got nothing to lose by relaying the ball into the plate if it isn't a good throw from the outfield, but otherwise we are playing the percentages by keeping those runners off second, where a hit would score 'em.

"I do most of the relaying from the outfield myself, because I think I've got the best throwing arm. When I go into the outfield to take short throws from Manush or Schulte, we figure to get the ball back faster than if they tried the long heave back to the infield. We won and saved a lot of games that way last year and we're going to play the same kind of baseball."

1919 Series Tip-Off.

It might be mentioned at this point that it was a cut-off play that was the first tip-off that the world series of 1919 between the White Sox and the Reds was crooked. When Pitcher Eddie Cicotte, of the White Sox, intercepted a perfect throw to the plate from the outfield for no reason whatsoever, it was such a flagrant piece of "bonehead" play that it could not be overlooked.

I forgot to mention a while back that Johnny Stone, the outfielder who made good his escape to the Nats from the Tigers last winter, distinguished himself to a great degree in today's practice. He has already ingratiated himself with Cronin by the lusty manner in which he has been socking the ball in the exhibition games, and today he uncoiled a throwing arm that breathed destruction to runners trying to score.

Stone was throwing strikes over the heart of the plate from the outfield as both Cronin and Griffith looked on approvingly and asked themselves who this guy Goslin was.

Red Roamer Survives Hard Drive to Score First Triumph of Year at Tropical

$5.40 Victor 4th Choice To Score

Holds on Gamely and Takes Head Margin Over Renewed.

TROPICAL PARK, March 29 (AP). Red Roamer, gelded son of Wildair which sports the black and and red silks of R. W. Collins, Kentucky horseman, recorded his first victory of the year when he survived a hard drive with N. E. Stanton's Renewed to win the fifth event by a head here today. J. Badame's Waterway was a fast closing third, a length away. The winner was confidently supported and was the fourth public choice to score, paying $5.40. The time for the mile and a sixteenth was 1:45.

Although the weather was threatening, a good sized week day crowd was in attendance, including Marvin H. McIntrye, a secretary to the vacationing President Roosevelt. The honored guest of the Gables Racing Association viewed the feature event from the stewards' stand Double for Hunter.

Jimmy Hunter, who is regaining the winning form he displayed early in the winter at Jefferson Park, completed a double on Red Roamer. The Canadian lad rode faultlessly, and had Renewed received equally capable handling he might have won. Bartering Kate led the field into the back stretch, where Burke sent Renewed into command. While they raced head and head, Red Roamer was creeping up on the outside. Bartering Kate stopped and round the bend Burke let Renewed lag long enough to lose a daylight advantage. The favorite shot around him turning for home and stuck his head in front. The Collins representative gamely held to his slight advantage to the end. Waterway made up a lot of ground and was pressing Renewed for the place at the wire.

Billie's Orphan, with weak opposition, made good for the talent in the curtain raiser, galloping to the judges four lengths in the van to pay $4.40. Battling Knight was second, a half length before Calgary Kay. Shuffle On forced the early running, but was taken wide and dropped back. Battling Knight, well up from the start, held on gamely to save the place, but was no match for the winner.

Heros Lady Is Victor.

Heros Lady was the second straight choice to score. Hustled away on top at the start, the Kilmer filly easily outran eight other maiden juveniles and won by three lengths, returning $4.90. Molly, racing close up from the start, closed fast through the stretch and nosed out the even-running Doubleton for the place. Canobie Lake stopped out of the money.

Uppercut was not equal to the task of keeping the winning streak of favorites intact in the third number. The gelding had all the best of the racing luck, but wound up third in a fighting finish. Just Buck took an early lead and withstood a long drive to score by a nose over Marevе, which forced the pace. The two leaders opened up and let Uppercut through on the inside turning for home, but the choice lost the place by a half length. Just Buck paid $11.30.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The story of Astoria, Oreg., from prehistoric times before the white men first saw it, to the time the first railroad was built through to that country, is written in pictures and etched on the face of a giant concrete monolith which stands on a hill near Astoria. The monolith itself is 125 feet high and was erected in 1926 at a cost of $125,000.

The pictured history shows the discovery of the Columbia River in 1792 by Capt. Robert Gray, also the river's early explorations. The arrival of the Lewis and Clark expedition at what is now Astoria, the building of Fort Clatsop in 1805, the meeting of the two parties sent out by Astor to trade with Indians, the building of Fort Astor, the blowing up of the trading ship Tonquin when hostile Indians overran it, killing most of the crew, the arrival of covered wagons from the East, and other landmarks in the history of Astoria are shown on the walls of the column.

Inside the monolith is a spiral stairway by which one may reach an observation platform at the top. From this point, 700 feet above the Columbia River, a panorama of the surrounding country for miles may be seen.

Dear Al: Tropical Park, March 30.

Unless Trainer Dick Thompson has a change of mind, Maryland racing fans will not see Don Meade ride at Bowie this spring. The famous long-shot rider and the boy who won last year's Kentucky Derby with Broker's Tip went from here to the Idle Hour Farm in Kentucky where he was to help Thompson prepare Bradley's Bazaar and other 3-year-olds for the coming derby. His absence would be good news to other riders of the first flight for Meade is a tough jockey with Maryland soil under his hirses. One winner was all the Bennings forces could muster today, marking the first time since this track opened that we have been below the two-mark. BILL.

First race—I'm taking Superlette Lou in the opener. We shall not get the price I was plotting for the other day when this one ran third. However, I believe, off that effort, we will chalk up a winner. Shuffle Off is fairly consistent and is my pick to outstay Mr. Boss for the place award.

Second race—Distribute has all the earmarks of a winning favorite in this sprint. Both races and trials point to a victory. Fred Almy drops down a peg here and will give the top one a battle. Playful Martha to take care of the others.

Third race—Polly Hundred is a well-regarded juvenile and deserves the call over this field. I'm tossing out that last outing. Happy Helen and Earle Maxell to complete the money picture.

Fourth race—I'm taking one more shot at Merrie Marie, despite the fact that she was last the other day. Lauretta Nash should have won her last. Alert handling will find her knocking at the door again Star Bud to take care of the remainder of the field.

Fifth race—Dornoch may get an off track tomorrow and will be dangerous. This one has been hard urged throughout the Florida campaign but clings to good form Vishnu and Style Corner to fill the place and show pay-offs.

Sixth race—Flying Gypsy failed me the other day but I'm coming right back. Certainly figures to beat this kind. Moiras Boy and Bert Lahr will be ready if the top one makes mistakes.

Seventh race—Gallic gets the Bennings call in the finale. Passing up Traffic Judge, which appears to be headed for favoritism. Ondott for the show.

Four New Men to Seek Celanese Team Berths

Cumberland, Md., March 29 (Spl.). When the Celanese Athletic Association's baseball team of the Inter-State League reports for practice early next month, there will be four new men trying for berths on Manager "Wibby" Garlitz's aggregation. They are George Beal, Johnny Thomas and Pete Cook, infielders, and Bee Scarpelli, outfielder.

Beal played third base for Mount Savage in the Cumberland and Georges Creek League last season. Thomas was keystone sacker for the Eagles, 1933 champions of the Inter-State League and gained a place on the all-star team. Cook, veteran first sacker, has played with Hyndman and Corriganville teams for a number of years. Scarpelli hails from Eckhart.

DOUBLETON, well up all the way, had no mishap. CANOBIE LAKE got away well, but tired badly in stretch. LAST MINUTE showed some improvement.

THIRD RACE—Five and a half furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming price, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:32. Off at 3:34. Winner, Mrs. F. MAREVE moved up gamely around turn on outside and had no mishap. UPPERCUT saved many lengths when field went wide on turn, but he was not good enough. DOZELESS closed a big gap. STEEL was outrun.

MANUAL broke running, showed excellent speed, but lasted to save the place. BOILING POINT, well up from the start, closed very fast in final sixteenth. NEON, on the outside, came with a rush and would have been second in another stride. PROSECUTOR appears to have lost his form.

Stocks Rally 1.4 Points on Inflation Hint

Metal Issues Lead Advance as Sales Increase to 1,036,140 Shares.

New York, March 29 (AP).—Speculative markets rallied today, getting their leverage, apparently, from possible inflationary implications of the Senate vote on increased veterans' benefits and reports that a move was under way to get upper House approval of a bonus payment with new currency.

On the stock exchange, metal issues had a good boom, especially in the last hour, and leaders in other groups tilted upward.

For mining issues net gains ran from 1 to 7 points; improvement elsewhere was less pronounced, averaging into a rise of 1.4 points. Trading was dull until the last hour when increasing activity swelled the total to 1,036,140 shares.

Trends in Congress.

Banking circles were inclined to stress what they said were political aspects of current trends in Congress, but the strength of the veterans' bloc did not pass unnoticed.

From the market standpoint, the increase of steel wages was presumably bearish since costs are to be lifted at a time when there is considerable conjecture as to the possibility of getting higher prices and expanding volume. Once inflation spectacles were readjusted, however, quotations advanced rather uniformly. No doubt preholiday short covering facilitated the rise.

French Francs React.

Meanwhile, French francs reacted, notwithstanding another gain in gold for the Bank of France. U. S. Government securities came back a little and closed irregularly.

Homestake Mining, up 8 points, and U. S. Smelting, ex dividend, with a net gain of about 7, were favorites in the metal division, though Cerro de Pasco, Howe Sound, American Smelting and McIntyre Porcupine were up around 2 to 3.

Other industrial sections responded more conservatively, U. S. Steel, Chrysler, National Biscuit, Westinghouse, General Motors, General Electric and Johns-Manville rising fractions to approximately a point. Case gained 3½ and International Silver 2¼. Rails and utilities were firm and rather quiet.

Amendments Being Made to Bankhead Cotton Control Bill Are Not Sufficient to Make Measure Acceptable to the Public as Consumers.

By Ralph West Robey.

Discussion of the Bankhead bill by the Senate, while resulting in various amendments, is doing nothing to convert this measure into a form which should be acceptable to the American public. As a matter of fact no amendments could do this. The basic thesis upon which the measure rests goes directly contrary to American traditions. It would place a large section of our economic system in a strait-jacket and subject it to a degree of political control that should be unthinkable. If the bill is passed it will stand as a monument to the hysteria and propaganda under which we still are laboring.

In general terms, the Bankhead bill attempts to place a definite limitation upon the volume of cotton that can be marketed. As it passed the House this limitation is 10,000,000 bales. Any excess above this is to be subject to what amounts to a confiscatory tax, the House bill providing a 50 per cent levy and the amendment just passed by the Senate establishing a 75 per cent levy. The 10,000,000 bale limit is distributed on the basis of past production as determined by ginning records. Should a farmer produce in excess of his quota, which he may do even with the best of intentions because of weather conditions, the tax will be imposed upon him should he attempt to market the cotton.

What is proposed then is simply, in effect, to license every cotton raiser in the United States. He will be told exactly how many bales he can raise. If he exceeds this amount it will be impossible for him to sell the produce at a price which will cover expenses. His income from his cotton raising, accordingly, must be derived from the price that he gets for his particular quota. Should he attempt to augment this income by bootlegging his surplus production he will be subjected to a fine and, according to the House bill, imprisonment for two years.

From an economic point of view it is conceivable that such a measure would result in a higher price for cotton. As one of our stable necessities the demand for this product is relatively inelastic and, consequently, we shall continue to bid up the price in an attempt to get an adequate supply. If the output is sufficiently reduced, accordingly, the price will rise and the farmers will get more per bale, although it does not follow that they will have a larger net income.

More briefly, the principle upon which the Bankhead bill rests, from the point of view of price regulation, is one of monopoly. The entire cotton raising fraternity will be banded together under a Federal license and that volume of production permitted which will result in a price that will be most satisfactory to the farmers concerned.

Would go Contrary to Interest of Public.

To the public at large and for the economic system as a whole such a program would be devastating to the exact degree to which it is successful. As consumers, we would be at the mercy of the cotton growers. Not only could they use the relative inelasticity of the demand for their product as a lever for raising prices, but as well they could prevent any one else coming into the field and consequently remove the protection that normally goes with open competition. We would have, in short, an agricultural "trust."

For the economic system as a whole the resut would be equally unsatisfactory. The prices for cotton constantly would tend to get out of line with the general price level. This would mean a new disequilibria and would enhance the difficulty of smooth operation of the business structure.

Quite aside from these considerations is the fact that once this plan is introduced for cotton it must be extended to cover one commodity after another. It can not stand alone. Should the bill be put on the statute books, accordingly, it means that we are taking a major step in the direction of the development of a whole series of "combines" designed for the specific purpose of gouging consumers.

Goods Markets.

New York, March 29 (A.P.).—Rayon dress materials were being bought more freely today for spring cutting. Rayon yarns sold more actively. Cotton goods showed little change in price for the day. Sales of gray cloths were made in moderate quantities with prices generally firmer than when the week opened. Silk printed good and corded weaves are in demand, with sales of fair volume reported. Wool goods remained quiet, but approval of trade practices by the NRA is expected to develop business soon. Burlaps were quiet and unchanged.

Bond Prices Edge Upward One-Tenth

Market Is Generally Quiet as Trading Volume Totals $10,262,000.

New York, March 29 (AP).—Most price changes in the listed bond market were without any particular significance today and trading generally was of a routine character.

The market will be closed tomorrow for the Good Friday holiday.

The volume of transfers was somewhat under that of yesterday, amounting to $10,262,000, par value. The average for 60 domestic corporate loans edged up 1-10 of a point to 84.9.

U. S. Loans Hesitate.

While U. S. Government Securities and the majority of prime investment corporation bonds displayed considerable hesitancy, in view of the inflationary implications of the overthrow by the Senate of the Presidential veto, there was no especial weakness in any of these groups.

Secondary issues were irregularly lower during the greater part of the session, but many of these rallied with stocks in the final hour.

The more active rail gainers of fractions to a point or more included some liens of Alleghany Corporation, Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Erie, International Great Northern, Southern Pacific, Southern, Western Maryland and Western Pacific. Among the easier carrier bonds were some of Union Pacific, Northern Pacific, New Haven, Great Northern and Chesapeake & Ohio.

Warner 6's Lively.

Warner Brothers 6's were the liveliest of the session, 232 of these changing hands at a gain of 2¼ points. Smaller advances were registered by issues of Western Union, United Drug, U. S. Rubber, Postal Telegraph, North American Edison, Montana Power, Milwaukee Electric, International Telephone, International Hydro-Electric, Columbia Gas and American & Foreign Power.

U. S. Treasury obligations were moderately irregular at the close, as were foreign bonds.

Loans of France and Argentina eased. Cuba Republic 5½'s lost 2 points and Swiss 5½'s were off 2¼. German Government 7's were up ¼ and the 5½'s were down as much. Other Reich issues sagged 1 to 2 or more.

Great Northern Railway's total assets, as of December 31 last, were $851,424,768, against $847,089,105 at the end of 1932. This compares with net profit of $6,824,289, or $2.17 a common share in 1932.

Detroit, Mich., March 29.—Action of directors of Kelvinator Corporation in voting a 12½-cent dividend, payable April 15, followed on the heels of a February shipment record 128 per cent better than any previous February in the company's history, March shipments for the first 20 days of the month already had exceeded the entire month of March, 1933, and incoming business was showing the same gains over previous years which characterized January and February operations.

Bankhead Bill Vote Advances Cotton Prices

May Closes at 12.01 as General Market Rises 22 to 26 Points.

New York, March 29 (AP).—Early advances in cotton today on relatively firm cables and an easier dollar in foreign exchange, were extended following Washington reports that the Senate had passed the Bankhead cotton control bill. July contracts sold up from 11.94 to 12.14 and closed at 12.13, with the general market finishing very steady at net advances of 22 to 26 points.

Opening prices were slightly higher on the action of Liverpool and foreign exchange.

Early demands came from the trade, Liverpool, Wall street and wire houses and offerings were limited.

Receipt of news early in the afternoon that the Senate had passed the Bankhead bill brought in a good volume of buying from local sources, but the rally attracted profit-taking and reactions of 13 to 15 points followed.

Outside demand increased, however, in the late trading as the news of the Bankhead bill passage became more generally known. May rose to 12.03 and October to 12.29, and final prices were at or within a few points of the best.

Opinion concerning the Bankhead bill was withheld in some quarters pending possible revisions in conference, owing to differences in the provisions as passed by the House and the Senate.

Exports today, 21,807, making 6,125,861 so far this season. Port receipts, 13,029. U. S. port stocks, 3,152,790.

Halsey, Stuart & Co. has sent letters to holders of Pacific Northwest Public Service Co. 6 per cent debenture bonds, reiterating opposition to the plan advanced by Franklin T. Griffith, temporary receiver for the Portland Electric Power Co., and approved by Federal Courts of the Oregon District. Paper Industry Begins Drive To Prosperity

Production and Prices Now Far Above '33 Lows; Mills Expanding.

New York, March 29.—After passing through three years of declining values and volume, a trend which was not checked until the second quarter of 1933, paper companies generally now have achieved a position which assures a more rapid rate of expansion.

The new year has started with production as well as prices far above the low levels prevailing early in 1933, and all branches are to be benefited further by the codes which promise the elimination of the price-cutting mania, which all but destroyed the industry a few years ago.

Average volume during the first quarter ranged from 35 to 40 per cent over that for the comparative 1933 period, demand covering nearly the entire range of papers, with bond and rag leading. The quick recovery of the wrapping paper division has been little short of phenomenal, and is indicative of the spreading improvement in general business activity.

Steadily Increasing Volume.

The steadily increasing volume during the last six months of 1933, together with the higher prices, enabled a number of firms to show profits at the close of the year, while in other instances losses were curtailed for the first time in four years.

Although the market is not quite so steady as it was last fall, indications point to a more accelerated movement during the next few months, with the largest gains to be recorded for the better grades of paper.

In marked contrast to the situation last summer, speculation is almost entirely absent, buyers holding commitments to actual needs. Orders are increasing each month, however, and the already advanced level of prices has assured a good inventory appreciation as the spring season progresses, according to a survey of the paper industry, which has just been completed by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

Mill Operations Expanding.

Volume of pulp and paper production is 20 to 50 per cent ahead of that of a year ago, and is maintaining the pace set by the general recovery movement.

Manufacturers in the Northwest report steady capacity schedules which have been maintained for the last eight months. Factory employment is increasing, now being 25 to 35 per cent larger than in March, 1933, with prospects for more frequent additions to pay rolls in the near future. Specialties are being produced in quantities as high as 100 per cent over last year's, while general purpose wrapping papers, especially kraft, are nearly double the shipments of that period.

Fruit wrappers are being turned out in quantities fully 50 per cent above last season's, in anticipation of an unusually good yield in various fruit districts.

Production of Newsprint.

While production of newsprint in the United States in 1933 declined to 946,374 tons, from 1,006,569 in 1932, or a drop of 6.2 per cent, the increase in the output of Canadian mills to 2,017,004 tons in 1933, from 1,907,566 the previous year, or a gain of 6.2 per cent, and larger contributions by mills of Mexico and Newfoundland enabled a small increase to be shown for the year.

For the total North American output of newsprint in 1933 was 3,250,579 tons, as compared with 3,207,291 tons in 1932, an increase of 1.3 per cent.

Since the first of the current year, production of newsprint has been increasing. January output for the United States and Canada was 26 per cent larger than in January, 1933, and in February the gain was 28 per cent, with the total production of 247,000 tons marking the largest February output in four years. In the paper-board division, which is one of the largest classes in point of tonnage, output has receded from around 75 per cent of capacity in the third quarter of 1933 to about 70 per cent of capacity, but current orders indicate wider operations in the next few weeks.

$2,500,000 Is Voted To Cigar Creditors

New York, March 29 (AP).—Payment of approximately $2,500,000 in dividends to approved creditors of the bankrupt United Cigar Stores Co. of America has been authorized by Federal Refree Irwin Kurtz.

The referee directed the Irving Trust Co., as trustee in bankruptcy, to pay the 25 per cent dividend from present assets of the bankrupt concern, which amount to some $10,000,000. The last dividend, 20 per cent, was declared September 11 last.

In declaring the dividend today, Kurtz said that the creditors will receive "100 cents on the dollar."

Walt Mason, Himself

The Happy Patriarch.

Folk admire that ancient man, with his tired, rheumatic limbs, who is always in the van of assembled Sunny Jims. In the happy days of youth it is easy to be gay and expound the vital truth that all griefs must fade away. It is easy to be glad when a man is feeling fine, when he needs no liver pad, and his feet are all in line. But the old man toils along with assorted pains and aches; every day there's something wrong with his sparkplugs or his brakes. There is something out of whack with his fetlocks or his toes; there are spasms in his back, there's a boil upon his nose. And his eyes are on the blink so he can not read his bills, and he has to take some pink or some partu colored pills. And his ears begin to balk, so they seem like idle fakes, and he can not hear the talk that the tax collector makes. And his joints are red with rust as he struggles up the street, and his teeth he must adjust every time he tries to eat. He is full of pain and pang, as he jogs along his way, but he makes a glad harangue to his comrades every day. Every village in the land has its ancient optimist; in the market place he'll stand, tapping grouches on the wrist. And he doesn't say a thing of his private grief or care, as he urges folks to sing and to throw their hats in air.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Revenge! — By Harry J. Tuthill

GEORGE, WHY ARE YOU TEARING OUT INTO THE HALL SO MUCH AND SLAMMING THE FRONT DOOR SO OFTEN THIS EVENING?
HERMAN ISN'T HOME YET. I KNOW THOSE RED HOTS HERE LAST WEEK PUT HIM ON THE X.
YESTERDAY HE TOLD ME HE WAS GOING TO WORK ON OUR CASE. THIS MORNING HE LEFT HOME REAL EARLY. NOW HE'S GONE.
GEORGE, DON'T BELLOW SO LOUDLY.
YOU'VE GOT THAT MAN'S WIFE JUST TERRIFIED, TOO. THERE SHE IS LOOKING OVER HERE.
HE HAD A BIG IDEA, HE SAID, FOR IDENTIFYING THE BOY. HE LEFT WITH A SMILE. NOW I KNOW HE'S A CROPPIE.
OH WHY GET HYSTERICAL JUST BECAUSE THAT MAN HAD A LITTLE MORE THAN THE USUAL AMOUNT OF TROUBLE FINDING HIS WAY HOME?
I'LL HAVE EVERY RIVER WITHIN 50 MILES OF HERE DRAGGED. AND WHOEVER DUNKED HERMAN WILL SETTLE WITH ME!
3-30.

"More men are needed to give leadership to Scout Troops," Walter MacPeak, educational director of the District of Columbia Boy Scout Council, said yesterday.

The next six months will be full ones in the scouting world—a period of organization, of new troops, of expansion, of camporees, hikes and camps. To carry through these projects more men are needed. Fathers of Scouts, and men interested in civic and community service, are urged to get in touch with the Scout troops at their own church or with Scout headquarters at 1018 Vermont avenue.

A Scout leader, according to a "job specification" plan being prepared by the committee on Leadership training, should be a man of character—a man possessing executive ability, a man who likes and understands boys, a man whom boys like, a man who must be willing to take the necessary leadership training and then be able to put it into use, a man who is enthusiastic about the program of scouting.

The committee plans training courses for men who are to become Scout leaders and recommends that men interested should know the basic and fundamental laws of learning as they apply to boy development as well as what the real aims and purposes of scouting are and the program of the Boy Scout movement for accomplishing these aims. This can be done best by attending a course in the "Elements of Scoutmastering," which course should be taken before a man takes charge of a troop. Assuming that the scoutmaster has executive ability, as stated in the job specifications, he should strive to perfect himself in the technique of scouting as rapidly as possible through the various training courses.

Takoma Park Parents' Night.

Troop 33 held its annual "Parents' Night" as a joint meeting with the Brotherhood Society of the Church, which is the sponsoring organization of the troop.

The program was a reproduction of a typical outdoor campfire meeting in which each patrol entertained with a campfire sketch. The Hawk Patrol offered a camping scene in which a contrast was drawn between the camping methods of experienced scouts and greenhorns. The feature of the Wildcat Patrol was the construction of a double lock pioneering bridge which was constructed on the stage. The Pine Tree Patrol put on an interesting archery stunt which was climaxed by a successful big-game hunt resulting in the death of a stuffed dog. Following this sketch Warren Steiner was presented with a half-dozen arrows as an award for winning the first Archery Merit Badge. Indian lore came in for its proper share of appreciation when the Eagle Patrol put on a sketch depicting the rescue of John Smith by Pocahontas. The reproduction of Powhatan and his warriors was quite authentic, but both John Smith and Pocahontas were rather modern characters.

Hazen Refuses Big Rum Force

22 More Inspectors Were Sought by Offutt; May Hire One.

The proposed addition of 22 inspectors to the staff of the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board was disapproved yesterday by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, who conceded, however, that a few more inspectors might be needed.

Commissioner Hazen said the Police Department is still charged with the duty of enforcing the liquor law, and he could see no reason for a duplication. The board now has seven inspectors and is authorized to employ another. Chairman George W. Offutt asked that the number be increased to 30.

Chairman Offutt yesterday asked the Commissioners to obtain funds to employ an assistant secretary to the Liquor Board because several CWA workers who had been assisting him are to be discharged March 31.
